Here Today, Gone Tomorrow, Bye Bye North Fork, Glad to Have Known Ya

By Dan Rattiner

I think the name "North Fork" is in danger. It is, as you know, one of the three major sections of eastern Long Island, the others being "Montauk" and "The Hamptons."

People who have been here know exactly where these places are. However, unlike Montauk and the Hamptons, there is actually no such real place as the North Fork. Think about it. There is Southampton, East Hampton, Bridgehampton, Westhampton and all the other Hamptons. (There was a time when some places to the west of the Hamptons tried to change their names to "Hamptons." It is a particularly attractive name. But Mastic Beach got booed, hooted and shamed to silence when it tried to become Hampton Beach, in order to better itself.)

As for Montauk, there is Montauk Harbor, Montauk Village, the Montauk Highway and the Montauk Lighthouse among about a hundred other such monikers.

But there is nothing, absolutely nothing on the map that says "North Fork." There is no North Fork Bay, North Fork Village or Lake North Fork. North Fork is nowhere. A figment of everyone's imagination. And there is no There there. I mean, there is no South Fork anything. If there is a North Fork, then where is the South Fork? And so the North Fork is in trouble.

This thought came clearly to my mind the other day when I learned of the purchase of the bus line that serves the North Fork by the big bus line that serves the Hamptons. The bus line that up until now brought people back and forth from Manhattan to the North Fork was never named the North Fork Bus Line, of course. It was called the Sunrise Bus Line. And so when the Hampton Jitney, a firm with a platinum reputation in ferrying people in and out of Manhattan, purchased the Sunrise Bus Line, there was simply no reason to save the name Sunrise. (And the sun, for whatever it's worth, doesn't even rise over the North Fork. It rises over Montauk and the ocean off the Hamptons.)

> But Montauk is Montauk. It is so different from the Hamptons that in spite of everything, it remains not a Hampton.

Now it is the Hampton Jitney buses that will ply the North Fork. And many people, particularly in the real estate business, think that is a good thing. If the whole North Fork name were to vanish and be replaced there by the name "Hamptons," real estate prices would go up. Another "Hampton" benefits almost everybody. One can see residents of the, er, North Fork puffing out their chests in pride as the sleek Hampton Jitney buses, complete with their airline comfortable seats and the attendants and the Roy Lichtenstein-designed graphics come rolling down the street.

What place wouldn't want to be a "Hampton?" Prices for everything — even a hamburger (le hamburgeiure) — are $15 each in the Hamptons. Mansions are selling for $55 million. The stores are top of the line and paying the highest rents. The Hamptons, Palm Beach, Palm Springs, Rodeo Drive — it all just kind of rolls off your tongue.

And even Montauk had its go-around about being a Hampton. There are people who have vacation homes in Montauk who say they are going out to "The Hamptons." Indeed, the Village of Montauk is an unincorporated affair, and if you get a parking ticket on Main Street in Montauk you will pay it at East Hampton Town Hall.

But Montauk is Montauk. It is so different from the Hamptons that in spite of every-

South O' the Highway (and the North too)

It was predicted that this year's Oscars, hosted by Sag Harbor's Jon Stewart, would be the lowest rated ever. Indeed, the audience of 38.83 million that tuned in this past Sunday was well below the numbers for last year's ceremony, which featured Chris Rock. While this proved ratings were down, they were not the lowest on record. The lowest rated Oscar telecast was in 2003, soon after the onset of the Iraq War, and Steve Martin was the host .

The Ross School announced last week that Timothy Kelley, the headmaster of Leyin American School in Switzerland, will serve as the new head of the Ross School in East Hampton. Mark A. English, head of the U.S Military Preparatory School in West Point, NY, will lead the Ross Global Academy, a new charter school opening in Manhattan in the fall.

The Police and Bomb Squad were called last week when Tristan Yapalater, ten-year-old son of writer Karin Yapalater, found a two-foot long metal missile on an East Hampton beach. It turned out to be a weather balloon tube.

Liam Neeson has been cast to play Abraham Lincoln in Stephen Spielberg's upcoming biopic. The Irish actor not only tried out his mutton chops before a live audience last week but brought a crowd at the Library of Congress to its feet with his rendition of the "Gettysburg Address." The Lincoln Family Album reading was narrated on-air by New York-based Lincoln scholar Harold Holzer, and will be rerun on C-span in April. Holly Hunter, who is said to be coveting the role of Mary Todd Lincoln, read alongside Neeson.

David Munk, the man who has run the songwriting company owned by Southampton's Denise Rich, has announced his departure in an email, referring to "uncertain times" but failing to state why he quit. He plans to form Vox Creative, an independent A&R consulting firm. Munk took over Rich's company four years ago from Jimmy Hester, who had run her firm for over a decade.

CBS Corp's radio division is suing Amagansett's Howard Stern, claiming its former star shock jock breached his contract when he moved to Sirius Satellite Radio Inc. The lawsuit, which also names Sirius and Stern's agent as defendants, claims Stern improperly used CBS radio's air time to promote his new show with Sirius, which began last month. CBS also claims Stern discussed his plans with Sirius without disclosing them to CBS as required under his contract. Stern said the lawsuit was meritless, and said CBS was trying to "bully" him and even called the lawsuit a "personal vendetta" against him by CBS Chief Executive Officer Les Moonves, whom thing, it remains not a Hampton. The people with money who come out to Montauk and who might qualify as Hamptonites are hidden away in Montauk because they came there to hide away. Montauk is surfing, paragliding, fishing, golfing, sunbathing and square dancing. There's sand dunes, moors, beaches and parkland and woods. There's a steady summer breeze in the summertime. The temperature is five degrees cooler in Montauk than the Hamptons (to which it is attached). There's just no getting around it. There's even a ranch with horses in Montauk. Two of them. With Western style horseback riding, not English. There's no polo. There's barrel racing. It's just not a Hampton.

As for the North Fork, people who go there who have never been to the Hamptons see it for what it is, a quiet, sweet, backwater farming and winery area. But people who have been to the Hamptons who go there say, "This is what the Hamptons was like twenty years ago." As in, watch it bloom. Or, buy a home now and watch the price go up. It surely looks like a Hampton. Farmland, old New England Villages. The town of Southold (on the North Fork) playfully vies with Southampton about which village is the first one founded in New York State. Both date from 1640. It comes down to months. And whether you count somebody wandering through without stopping, or stopping but just for a week. The North Fork is a Hamptons in training.

Last week, Suffolk County announced a program to lease the naming rights to some of the places they own. It's being done all around the rest of the country, as you know. Continental Airlines is the name on the Arena in the Meadowlands of New Jersey. The Qualcomm Stadium in San Diego refers to the technology company.

I am thinking hard about how to save the name North Fork. And at first, I thought that if they leased a stadium to the North Fork Bank it would help. But then I realized that a lease is a lease is a lease. North Fork might be on the stadium for three years. After that, it might be Google Stadium. Or Rolaids Stadium. So that won't work.

Then I thought of the North Fork Bank itself. Here was a bank, founded on the North Fork many, many years ago, which under the guidance of President John Kanas has expanded to much of the northeastern United States and beyond. It has hundreds of branches, in places like Parsippany, New Jersey. Doesn't that qualify to solidify the name "North Fork?"

Actually, it does the contrary. The North Fork Bank may have grown because it has frequently been voted as the best run bank in the United States, but it has also grown because the name "North Fork," referring not to the northern fishtail of eastern Long Island but just in general, has a kind of environmentally correct quality. Consider, for example, the clothing company "North Face." Their label is famous around the world. "North Fork" sounds like a bend in the river. And from that perspective it could refer to any rural, wooded area anywhere. North Fork thus gets diluted. North Fork is everywhere and nowhere.

No, nothing is going to save the "North Fork" other than a name change of an actual place in that community. Somebody has got to volunteer. It could be Greenport, Mattituck, Cutchogue, Aquebogue, Laurel or Orient. I think Orient is worth giving up. Orient is an adverb. How can a place be an adverb, anyway? It can't be an adverb. Well, pride being what it is, I don't expect Orient or any of the other of these places to step forward, no matter how dumb their name sounds.

What I DO think might be possible is a renaming of "Route 25." The main drag through the entire North Fork does have a name other than Route 25, but it keeps changing depending upon where you are on it. I think it really should be known as North Fork Road. Its whole length. And that might, in the end, save the North Fork.

How about it? I bet this will never happen. Beautiful Hampton Jitneys gliding down North Fork Road? What? You want to confuse people? Want to roll back the clock? •

The Answer Man

Solving Cattle, Golf & Synagogue Problems in the Hamptons & Montauk

By Dan Rattiner

The middle of winter is the time of year that important decisions are made in the Hamptons. In the Town and Village Halls there are speeches, arguments, charts and considerations given to all sorts of complex issues. It's not like in the summertime when all the high-powered lawyers are in evidence and everything happens Just Like That and then everybody has to go outside to take conference calls on their Blackberries.

At the moment, there are three big complex issues on the table. One is in Southampton, one is in Amagansett and one is in Montauk. To get the solutions to these complex questions, we went to the Answer Man.

Dan's Papers: The South Fork Country Club in Amagansett wants to put a driving range on a part of their property that has been reserved in perpetuity for agricultural use. They are offering to buy six vacant acres elsewhere in town, reserve those six acres for agricultural use, and then take the currently preserved six acres and put their driving range on it. The golfers say, what's the difference? Six saved acres is six saved acres. The Town says that the acreage saved was very specifically supposed to be the particular six acres saved. And to start swapping land higgelty piggelty like this would set a dangerous precedent. Who is right?

Answer Man: Both sides are assuming that having a driving range is not an approved agricultural use. But they are wrong. One can send in the farm workers to pick the crops in between golf shots. It was done in the nineteenth century. The workers move fast if they know what's good for them. And so that saves time and money. Furthermore, besides giving farmhands a good workout, a golf ball such as a Titleist PRO V1x giving a potato plant a good smack strengthens the plant and makes it stronger. It's a known fact that potato plants that survive a hailstorm produce bigger potatoes than those that never have that experience. The golfers and the farmers can live side by side, or in this case, above and below.

> There is a dispute between the ranchers and the homeowners now. It involves cattle and cattle poop.

Dan's Papers: In Southampton, a rabbi on Hill Street bought a house next to the Catholic Church and is now holding religious services in it. Sometimes there are 40 people at Friday night services. The neighbors are upset. The rabbi says the Constitution gives him and his followers the right to hold services in his home. The neighbors say the Constitution is not intended to allow a religious leader to put a church or synagogue anywhere he wants. Who is right?

Answer Man: The Constitution was signed into law, actually creating the laws that it itself was signed into, in 1787. There are some that argue that those religions that were in effect before 1787 are not protected; that is to say, the Constitution was referring only to those religions in existence that year and afterwards. So if the Rabbi's religion goes back to BEFORE 1787, then it was not protected, unless of course it was also in existence AFTER 1787. Which I think in this case it was. Although that may not relate to this particular sect. I have no idea.

Dan's Papers: The Oldest Cattle Ranch in the United States is located at Montauk. The settlers in nearby East Hampton drove their cattle out to it during the summertime as early as 1656. Over time it has been called Second

House Ranch and Deep Hollow Ranch. Most recently, it has been split into two ranches with one half known as Indian Field Ranch and the other half now called the Theodore Roosevelt County Park Ranch. But now there is trouble at the 100 acre Indian Field Ranch. Twenty years ago, at a time that a corner of this ranch was broken off so several private homes could be built at the edge of the property, two legal documents were written by the Town Attorney to give the ranch the right, in perpetuity, to continue to raise cattle. One document is an easement and gives the ranchers "the exclusive right" to use and enjoy the property. The other document, apparently written by the same lawyer at the same time, is a "reserved use" document. It says that that the ranchlands are to be "for the recreational uses for the common use of all lot owners," which it seems would include the owners of the homes adjacent to the ranch as well as the ranchers. There is a dispute between the ranchers and the homeowners now. It involves cattle and cattle poop. The homeowners, citing the second document, want the ranchers to discontinue raising cattle on the ranch. And the Town has been asked to interpret this document the town attorney wrote at that time. Should the ranchers at the ranch stop ranching?

The Answer Man: This reminds me of that tongue twister Peter Piper Picked a Peck of Pickled Peppers. But I think that has nothing to do with this. I think the solution to this problem lies in the existence of the phrase "recreational use" in the second document. In either document, the ranchers are included. In only the "recreational use" document does it also include the homeowners. Clearly the answer to this is for the ranchers to engage in "recreational use" on their ranchland, which would include square dancing, calf roping, drug taking, hip hop, drag racing, rugby, skeet shooting and bowling. All recreational uses. After a while, with all the loud music, the mooing, the crashing of the bowling balls, the firing of the guns and the screeching of car engines, I think the homeowners will see the error of their ways. It doesn't say "the oldest bowling alley in America," does it? It does?

Or here is another idea. Have the ranchers do their ranching during the day under the first document, but have the ranchers and the homeowners do their recreation during the night under the second document. The animals should be asleep in the barns anyway during the night. That would work. •

She says that "her people are in talks with Hilton's people" about the real Hilton appearing on the fake Hilton's reality show.

A Case Study of How Not to Build a Franchise at Madison Sq. Garden

By Dan Rattiner

The New York Mets baseball team was founded in 1962. At the time, there were just sixteen cities in the country that had baseball teams. Eight were in the American League. Eight were in the National League. The winners of each league played a World Series and that was that.

In the early 1960s, however, the powers that be decided to expand the number of teams playing baseball. The game had become so popular there was a need for it. And it was decided that one place to expand would be to Queens where they would put the New York Mets.

But who would play on this team? The decision was made to ask each of the sixteen teams to shave off the worst two or three players they had and give them to the new expansion teams. And thus there came into existence the single worst team ever to play the game of Major League baseball, the New York Mets of 1962. Huge crowds of people came to watch this inept group of bunglers lose every day. They set records for losing. And found new ways every day to do so.

Standing just outside the dugout, chewing tobacco and watching this debacle every day was Casey Stengel, their manager. He had years before been manager of the New York Yankees. He was aging. But he had reluctantly agreed to come out of retirement to coach one last time. Once, standing there, watching a grounder go through "Marvelous" Marv Throneberry's legs at second base, he asked "Doesn't anybody know how to play this game?" They wound up losing 120 games, more than any other team in the twentieth century.

I bring this up at this particular time, because we have a similar situation today in New York City with the basketball team known as the New York Knicks. Except instead of a bunch of second-raters and has-beens playing their hearts out, there is a bunch of

NO LONGER EXTINCT IN NEW GUINEA

By Dan Rattiner

Last week, some explorers made an astonishing discovery. Wandering around in the forests of New Guinea, their guides happened to mention a particular valley over on one side of the island beyond the Foja Mountain where nobody ever went. The explorers asked to be taken there, and when their guides refused, saying the mountain was unscalable, they returned to base but then chartered a helicopter to take them.

Two hours later, they found a clearing where they could set down. They then disembarked and set up a tent camp where they would stay, they said, for several days, examining the flora and fauna. They have now returned to report that they may have been the first humans ever to have gone there.

The valley covers 3,700 square miles, and on the first day alone, the naturalists among them spotted more than 40 rare species of mammals that they had believed to be extinct. They also found all sorts of bizarre creatures, including six different kinds of kangaroos (including one that lives in trees) and a spined, egg-laying hedgehog-like creature that was so docile it allowed them to come over, pick him up, and carry him back to camp.

All of this was reported by an organization called Conservation International in Washington, D. C., and by the Biology Research Center of the Indonesian Institute of Science, which, together, had sponsored this expedition.

Among those creatures which were believed to have become extinct because they had ceased to exist elsewhere were a black-eyed orange-faced honeyeater and a golden-fronted bowerbird, which was believed to have existed because there were natives who had some of their skins. This creature had not been found superstars. And their coach, hired with high hopes over the summer, is a superstar coach. The payroll for the team exceeds $120 million. It's the largest payroll in the history of basketball. And the coach, Larry Brown, is being paid $50 million. These are unheard of numbers. At this writing they are in last place with the worst record in the sport. And they have lost 21 of their last 24 games. The worst part of it all is that very few people are coming to Madison Square Garden to watch this debacle. Though they should. Or at least those who live on Long Island and use the Cablevision service should. They are the ones who are paying the money to bankroll it. So they might at least see it.

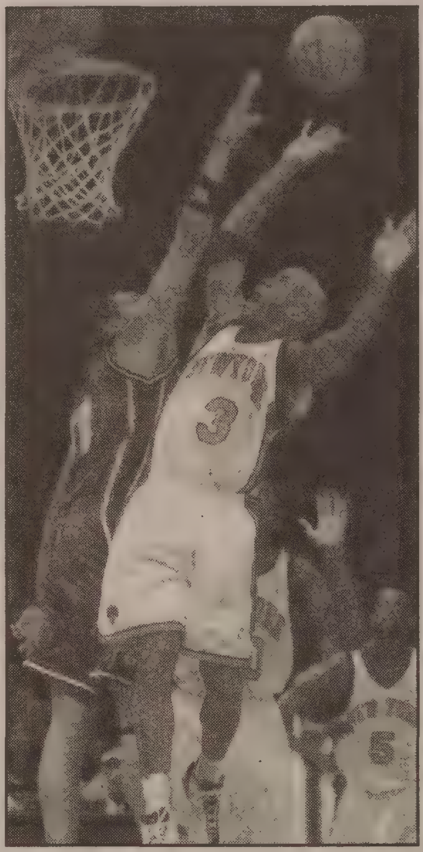
The story of how the Knicks have come to be such a disaster in just one year is an interesting one and I will get to it. But first I think you are owed an explanation of how you — and practically everybody on Long Island who uses Cablevision — are paying for it.

Cablevision owns the Knicks. Years ago, Charles Dolan, the founder of Cablevision on Long Island, began to amass a group of New York City sports teams and sports arenas, in the belief that owning the content for his cable service on Long Island would enable him to charge whatever he wanted for it. Viewers want sports channels. Perhaps he could even corner the market. He already had a monopoly on the cable television market on Long Island. During a brief buying spree, Dolan bought a number of sports teams, and even tried to buy the New York Jets football team, but failed. He did wind up with a hockey team, Madison Square Garden, and the New York Knicks. So it was not a complete failure.

What did Charles Dolan, or his son James, who soon became CEO, know about running a sports team? Nothing. They knew the cable business. Dolans' sports teams floundered. And the Knicks sunk to mediocrity.

Under pressure from the fans and particularly from vocal sportswriters in the press, James Dolan apparently decided to make the New York Knicks basketball team a championship contender, no matter what the price. He had only to look at what George Steinbrenner had done in throwing money at the New York Yankees. The Yanks are winners. And with the highest payroll in baseball. Dolan would do the same for the Knicks.



And so he has. Or has tried to. The crown jewel of his spending spree last year was Larry Brown, arguably the greatest and winningest coach to ever come to the NBA. Dolan hired him away from the Detroit Pistons. $50 million would do. And you might remember him out here in the Hamptons last summer at the Artist-Writers Softball Game, the man who would bring the Knicks to glory, out in East Hampton just one month before the start of the preseason. James Dolan, bless his heart, was buying us a winner.

Keep in mind that Cablevision is not Standard Oil. If they were, and they went out and lavished hundreds of millions of dollars on a sports team, it would be just a little dent in the corporate structure. But Cablevision has revenues of only $5 billion. A gamble of a hundred million or so has to have a payoff. And in the absence of one, it is us Cablevision customers who will pay in the end. With a million of us customers on Long Island, it is fair to say that monthly cable prices will have to rise about $12 to cover this catastrophe. Cablevision can do that, and probably will. They still have a monopoly.

For those interested in knowing how you can throw several hundred million dollars at something and have it go from mediocrity to disaster, here is how you do it. It's not rocket science. It's shooting a ball through a hoop.

New Riverhead

If All Goes According to Plan, You Won't Recognize this Place Next Year

By Dan Rattiner

For nearly fifteen years, the Town of Riverhead has been trying to find a way to develop the former Grumman Aerospace property eight miles to the west of downtown. Grumman left the area in 1993. And they gave their 3,000-acre military campus to Riverhead for $1. The Town Board has argued and argued about it. They have listened to proposal after proposal. How this property would be developed would determine the future of Riverhead. Downtown was very depressed. It would be very important to do the right thing with Grumman.

Now, after fifteen years, they have come to the conclusion that they have been asking the wrong question. The real question is how to develop downtown Riverhead itself, and then the rest will follow. And so tonight, Tuesday, as we go to press, the town will vote to begin a massive redevelopment of downtown, perhaps the largest ever undertaken of any redevelopment anywhere on Long Island. If they approve, planning for it begins next month, and will continue on for the next eighteen months. Once they are done, Riverhead will be transformed.

The town, developer Appollo Real Estate, and architect Spector Group of North Hills, will have guided the expenditure of more than $100 million to turn downtown Riverhead into a showcase on the bay. After that, the outlying areas, including Grumman, will take care of themselves.

The plan calls for a complete redevelopment of East Main Street, from the traffic light in the center of town to the Aquarium at the far end of East Main a half a mile away. There will be street plantings, brickwork and benches and clocktowers. New structures will house 100 condominium units, a 1,000 car three story garage, a 14-screen multi-plex, a supermarket and a new manmade waterfront lake, which will be frozen in winter to become an ice

THE EAST END GOES GREEN THIS WEEK & NEXT

By Julia Nasser

The time of year has come again for people of the South Fork to get out their Celtic garb and march along to the sound of Irish ballads. Crowds will shortly line the streets of Westhampton Beach, Hampton Bays and Montauk for the annual St. Patrick's Day parades.

The 39th Annual Westhampton Beach parade, always one of the most spirited occasions of the year, will take place on March 11. This year, the St. Patrick's Day Committee has expanded the weekend.

The festivities begin the evening before, on March 10th, with Irish rock n roll by Fathom at Fin McCoul's in Westhampton Beach. The next morning this local Irish haunt will host a hearty breakfast to benefit "HUGS," an East End program designed to provide teens with alternatives to drugs. At noon, the parade makes its way down Mill Road and Main Street, led by Grand Marshall Charlie Bass. This festive occasion has become a huge draw over the years, bringing many thousands of people to watch the boisterous procession of fire engines, floats and marching bands. Afterwards, all are invited to a traditional Irish meal of corned beef and cabbage at St. Mark's Church from 1-5 p.m. For those inclined towards more athletic events, the "Aerobatic Stunt Show" will be taking place at Rogers Beach at 3 p.m., featuring local acrobatic professional Michael Manscuso in a dazzling air show.

Finally, The Irish Rovers will perform at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. These seven bards hailing from Northern Ireland deliver a rollicking and rousing performance of anthems of revelry and ballads about their native land. If you have a drop of energy to spare after the day of activities, drive skating rink. The waterfront boardwalk will be expanded. And several older buildings on East Main will be removed to give visitors a grand view of the Peconic Bay from downtown before heading the few hundred yeard walk down to it to enjoy the attractions there. There will be seven new acres of parkland on the water.

In short, if Riverhead had suffered in recent years from all the shopping centers that opened up outside of town, it would return to its former glory by becoming a shopping center itself. As things stand now, the town owns 30,000 square feet of parking between the stores on East Main and the river. The project begins by selling this space to the developer.

Riverhead was founded in the 18th century as a transportation hub. Here, the Peconic River flows eastward from western Long Island, to meet the headwaters of Peconic Bay. Industry came, docks were built and the farmers took to the town at the head of the river there for their central market. It also became the County Seat in 1792. The County Courthouse was built here. So were all other offices.

Beginning around 1950, however, Riverhead went through a disastrous decline. In a redistricting, the eastern half of Suffolk County lost most of its power and a new county center was subsequently built forty miles to the west, in Islip. Much of the County Seat moved. Though the courts remain, not much else does.

Potato farming began its long slide downward beginning around 1960. And in 1970, Route 58 was built to bypass Riverhead, resulting in almost all the retail trade moving out of town to shopping centers along that bypass. The subsequent loss of Grumman, the largest supplier of aircraft to the U. S. Navy, and the biggest employer on Long Island, was the biggest blow of all. Many of the officers and employees of Grumman lived in the town. Downtown spiraled into near bankruptcy.

The changes which have led to the revival of downtown Riverhead happened early on in the area surrounding Riverhead, but not in it. The Hamptons thrived as a resort to the southeast and southwest. The wine business came to the North Fork to the northeast and today there are 27 wineries thriving along that stretch. To the northwest, several developments occurred not far from the Grumman property, which, at first, seemed to take away even more from downtown. One was the Tanger Mall, a complex of 165 retail shops. Tanger promised and did bring in a trolley that served as a shuttle between downtown and Tanger, but nobody used it. It had to be abandoned. Then Splish Splash, a big water park, opened up to the northwest of downtown. And suddenly suburbanites from the populous western end of Long Island, where two million people live, were coming east to the Riverhead area to go to the malls and to enjoy the water park.

The big changes downtown came within the past ten years, one by accident, and one on purpose. The one by accident was the need to tear down old decrepit buildings that were no longer being used downtown. In doing so, the Town uncovered a remarkable secret. Until they tore these buildings down, no one really noticed that Riverhead was actually waterfront. The Town had been built, as were many industrial towns in the northest, with its back to the water. Now, with the buildings gone, one could see the beauty of the river and the bay. There was a falls, long put out of sight to the west of downtown behind some old buildings, that came into view. The Town did not need to be asked twice to put in a park by the falls, clearly visible from the center of town.

The second change, on purpose, was the establishment of the Riverhead Aquarium at the most easterly end of East Main Street. A great attraction, it stretched all the way from the street down to the water of the bay behind it. And suddenly downtown was alive, as a waterfront town, as western Long Island suburbanites came to shop at Tanger and the other malls, and enjoy the attractions at Splish Splash and at the big aquarium.

Riverhead will not become another cutsie Hampton or North Fork colonial New England town. It will be itself – a former factory town, now reborn, and, with a little luck, a destination for entertainment, the arts, water sports and other attractions.

Welcome home Riverhead.

Underwater Power

A Solution to Our Energy Problems Comes and Goes With the Tides

By David Lion Rattiner

There are many different types of alternative energy, but four of them are always in the limelight when we talk about making a greener earth. There is wind power, but the problem with wind power is finding places where the windmills are out of sight. Then there is solar power, which works well, but is very expensive and involves putting odd looking solar panels onto your home. Lately, we have been hearing about bio-diesel and ethanol. This is a fuel that you can create from corn and can also put into internal combustion engines. The problem with this however is the large oil infrastructure that we already have, the desire by powerful companies to maintain that infrastructure and the cost of refining corn so that it can be used as a combustible fuel and the cost of integrating the fuel into society.

Then of course there is nuclear fuel. But none of us wants nuclear fuel anywhere nearby and we don't care how much energy it can create. All it takes is one little mix up and we all know what happens after that.

So all of these forms of energy have their pitfalls. One day, one of them will take the place of oil. But not just yet. For now, we continue to need oil. It is a matter of time before we are simply going to run out of it. Or compete for it so fiercely it gets priced out of reach.

There is another source of energy that I recently learned about that is relevant to The Hamptons and Long Island. The media has dubbed it lunar power, but in reality it is hydropower, though not the hydropower that you and I think of when we hear the term. I'm not talking about any Hoover Dam.

No. "Lunar power" involves giant underwater turbines that use the gravitational force from the moon that makes the tides go in and out to create energy.

The great thing about "lunar power" is the fact that you can build the machine under water, which eliminates the visual pollution

JULIE ANDREWS AND THE SOUND OF BAY STREET

By Harriet Edwards

The Bay Street Theater in Sag Harbor was alive last Saturday with the Sound of Music and the delighted chatter of a full house of fans of this classic movie, now celebrating its 440thyear. Talk in the lobby before the film was all about the past; how many times have you seen it? When was the last time you saw it? What ever happened to (insert name of actor here)?

Enthusiastic moviegoers were happy to revisit the von Trapp family and their idyllic life before World War II, and their narrow escape from the Nazis when it began. They scooped up the handouts made available; Sound of Music Trivia, Goofs in continuity, geography, and facts, a full list of cast and crew, and a complete filmography (and more) of Julie Andrews.

Talk was also centered on anticipation of the real highlight of the evening, the appearance of Julie Andrews herself, beloved star of the show and local resident with a home in North Haven. Index cards and a basket were provided for attendees to write their questions for her to answer after the screening; over 80 were submitted.

The Sound of Music begins with the title song, sung by postulant nun Maria glorying in the beauty of the Austrian mountains. Then the title credit comes up, and the audience actually applauded, then settled in to enjoy the very familiar plot and music. This a very long movie, a bit over three hours, and even includes an intermission, but no one seemed to mind as the nuns of the Abbey solved a problem like Maria by sending her off to serve as governess to the seven motherless von Trapp children. They quickly fall in love with her, as does their father, all to the tune of such standards as "My Favorite Things," "Do Re Mi," problem. The turbines can also spin slowly, or if spinning faster, can be protected with gratings so no fish get caught in them.

And it is easy to predict how much energy you can get out of each turbine. (Build a windmill, it is difficult to access the energy. You might have a windy day. You just never know.) Tides, however, can be predicted thousands of years in advance. The power these turbines can generate is also significantly greater than a wind farm because of the physical weight of water.

So how did this technology go unnoticed for so long? How could an environmentally conscious guy like myself not have heard about it? Well, it basically just fell off the radar screen after government funding by the Carter and Reagan administrations during the mid-80s dried up.

Today, however, the oil scare we had last summer still lingers in every SUV driver's mind and private projects are underway. One is right in our backyard. The East River in New York City is getting a tidal turbine by a company called Verdant Power. Once an 18-month trial is completed, Verdant plans to build 300 turbines that would have the ability to power 8,000 homes in New York.

There are similar projects going on in Europe as well. A company called Ocean Power Delivery has built a machine that turns wave motion into energy. They have sold the machines to Portugal and will generate enough power for 1,500 homes. In 2008 they plan on providing enough power for 15,000.

As for wind power, LIPA's offshore wind project here on Long Island will result in 40 General Electric wind-powered generators off Jones Beach, Gilgo Beach, Cedar Beach and Robert Moses State Park. It will generate enough power to help meet the growing demands of electricity on Long Island. But you will be able to see the windmills out in the water which has a substantial number of people opposed to the project. But lunar power is all done underwater and out of sight. Imagine hearing opposition against renewable, clean, out of sight energy that will help slow down the outrageous demand for oil. You would only have a few complainers and all of them would be complaining just for the sake of it.

in spite of more than 80 prior expeditions to do so. There was also a herd of six wired birds of paradise, which paraded into camp one evening and performed their mating dance, completely oblivious to the astonished humans around them.

(Of interest to the East End was the sighting of the Great Ecuadorian Eel, a 36-foot long creature that spends the summers in its ancestral home of Ecuador while occasionally making migrations to the Hamptons and the North Fork in the wintertime. Only ten of these eels have been known to exist in Ecuador, and only two of them have ever come to eastern Long Island.

The scientists in New Guinea, who saw what they say was a whole herd of them, basking on the rocks of the island, believe they may have their main home on the island, instead of in Ecuador. And though the eels are absolutely crucial to the Ecuadorians, the scientists now refer to them as the Great New Guinea Eel, which has sparked riots and demonstrations in Quito, the capital of Ecuador, demanding that the name never be changed.) •

Who's Here

Dennis Watlington

Author

By David Lion Rattiner

When you meet Dennis Watlington, the first thing that you notice is his bright white smile and his perfectly straight teeth as he greets you with a firm handshake. He is one of those people that simply exude confidence, charisma and charm. I had the opportunity to meet with this remarkable man at Gurney's Inn out in Montauk and was simply floored by his story. Today, he is a nationally recognized author, but his rise to success was no cakewalk; in fact, it was borderline impossible.

From as early as ten years old, growing up in the Harlem projects, the battle of hard drugs, crime and introductions to death were just some of the few obstacles he faced in life. Dennis Watlington is one tough cookie.

Born in Harlem in 1952, Dennis spent his time on 125th Street, which he says is, "Probably one of the most significant cultural streets in America."

His mother was a domestic and his father was a janitor who worked in an office building in Manhattan. "He had to get to work really early. When he would go to work, he dressed in a suit and tie. At an early age I thought my father was a big shot executive."

He lived in his project apartment with his two brothers and two sisters, Calvin, Robert, Harriet, and Gloria. By the age of thirteen, heroin gripped both him and his neighborhood. "The drug epidemic during the sixties in Harlem was so bad you just wouldn't believe it. It was just a way of life then. I'm not proud of it."

He spent three years as a drug addict and a criminal, living hand to mouth. Guessing that sixteen-year-old Dennis would grow up to be a famous author made about as much sense as saying that the earth is flat. As if things could not get any worse, he contracted hepatitis from a dirty needle that nearly killed him.

From this experience however, Dennis was able to get into rehab and began a "Just Say No Tour" at sixteen years old that changed his life.

He began publicly speaking about the dangers of drug addiction, and at seventeen found himself giving a speech in Greenwich, Connecticut, where a chance meeting with William V. Brokaw, a trustee for Hotchkiss Prep School, sent his life in a completely opposite direction. "He came right up to me after he heard me speak and said, 'want to go to Hotchkiss?' I had terrible grades and algebra was hieroglyphics to me. They gave me a psychological test where I had to look into an inkblot. I told them I saw a donkey and then I got into Hotchkiss. The school had 440 students, 8 of whom were black." Just like that, Dennis was attending one of the wealthiest schools in New England.

Through hard work and a determination to change his life for the better, he excelled at Hotchkiss, entering the school in 1969 and making his mark as the star football player and the president of the class in 1970. He graduated from the school and got into New York University, which he attended for a year, studying education. He then was offered a job as the director of the East Harlem Community Center, the very same center that helped him through his drug addiction. From there he suddenly found a talent for acting and attended a theater school in West Harlem. His good looks and talent for writing gave him his first taste of show business. He was offered a role in the Academy Award winning film, The Deer Hunter, but turned it down and decided that he wanted to concentrate on writing and wrote his first play, Bullpen, which was produced by the American Theater of Actors.

> Guessing that sixteen-year-old Dennis would grow up to be a famous author made about as much sense as saying that the earth is flat.

It was here that he met the love of his life, Anne McCormack, in a health food store. Anne is a white Irish girl whose father was the head of narcotics for New York City. Needless to say, it was an interesting match. They have been married for 29 years. They have three kids, Keelan, Ariel and Avery.

Anne's family has a house in Sag Harbor and the two of them headed out to the Hamptons during the summers whenever they could get the chance. "I simply love East Hampton. It is such a beautiful place," says Watlington. During this time, Dennis had found work as a writer after meeting Gail Sheehy, the author of the best selling book, Passages, who suggested to him that he begin writing about his past. He wrote consistently for Vanity Fair, The New York Times and American Way Magazine. He also wrote several Movie-of-the-Week scripts for various networks and wrote for ABC daytime dramas such as All My Children, One Life To Live and The City.

Today, Dennis is out promoting his new book, Chasing America: Notes of a Rock 'n Soul Integrationist which was mostly written out in Montauk. "The book was born on old Route 27 in Montauk," says Dennis. Dennis got much of his writing done on the beaches of the Hamptons, finding it a perfect place for him to write and gather his thoughts.

Chasing America was picked up by St. Martins Press and was published nationally in February of 2005. Dennis is currently on tour promoting his book, which has received positive reviews from The New York Times. He has also enjoyed doing local promotions, spending an afternoon with Ingrid Lemme on her televisions show, "The American Dream Show" which airs on Hamptons Television.

"This memoir doesn't have any lies in it," Dennis says with a twinkle in his eye.

The remarkable life of this man who defied every obstacle thrown at him continues as he and his wife work together promoting his book throughout the country. His story is a tale about beating all the odds and surviving one of the toughest hands that life can deal to a person, taking advantage of the opportunities, and rising above adversity with spirit.

TWENTYSOMETHING. . . By DAVID LION RATTINER

The Need To Punch

My younger brother, Gabriel, who attends college at SUNY Purchase, came home over the weekend for a visit. For some reason, every single time I see Gabe, the first thing that I want to do is playfully punch him.

I don't know why I want to do this. I think it is some sort of innate brother thing. When we were kids, I would do this often. It was no big deal. I'd be eleven and he'd be ten and I'd see Gabe and then I would punch him, he'd punch me back, we would fight until one of us cried and that was that. It made sense to do when we were little, it toughened us up.

But now I am no longer a kid. You could even go as far as saying that I am a man, and there I was last weekend, battling this incredible urge to punch my younger brother. If you are an older brother, or an older sister even, you know what I am talking about it. There is something very natural about this feeling, it is almost like an instinct. It's like some kind of alarm goes on in my head that says, "Punch Gabe, Punch Gabe," and the only way to shut it off is to punch him.

This is all very unfortunate for Gabe, who really does not enjoy getting punched, at least not anymore he doesn't. I can't blame him. After all, who the heck likes to get punched? Things have changed since we were little. When we were kids, if I punched him, he'd punch back, which would result in another punch in the stomach by me, which then would turn into a slap in the face by him, which would then turn into an all out wrestling match that occasionally would involve lamps, barking dogs, pillows and sometimes a broken television set.

Am I too old for this? I think not. But Gabe seems to thinks so and it could not have been any more clear to me last weekend when I greeted Gabe with a punch that resulted in him saying, "What the hell is wrong with you, man?" Gabe has transformed from a guy that likes getting punched to a guy that does not.

Guys in general like to fight one another over nothing. It stems from a basic instinct that all predators have. If you watch the Discovery Channel, any show about lions will show the lion pups scratching and biting one another. The commentator on the show will say something like this, "Here we see two lion pups play fighting one another. Although to us it may just look like they are enjoying a gentle wrestling match, what is actually happening is that the pups are learning important hunting and survival tactics for when they are adults."

This is true for me, too, I think. Only I know I am probably never going to have to hunt down a gazelle or battle another lion for my territory. But that does not mean that I should not keep my skills up, does it?

It then occurred to me that dogs are like this, except dogs have become so domesticated that there are the dogs that enjoy wrestling around and there are the dogs that do not. You all know the type of dog that likes to wrestle. You greet him at the door. Usually he is a labrador or a golden retriever and he starts to wag his tail like a maniac because you have just walked in the door. He can't wait for you to pet him, smack him in the face, throw a ball for him to chase or wrestle with him. If you ignore him he'll follow you all through the house,

The game of basketball on this level consists of five basic elements. An aggressive defense keeps the other team away from the basket. Rebounding gets the ball to the offense when it bounces off the rim. Running gets you down the court fast to get you there first. Quick ball handling keeps the other team dazzled. And good shooting scores the points. The main element about good shooting, besides accuracy, is not being afraid to shoot when you have a shot.

As the season approached, it was apparent that Brown was going to demand excellence in each of these five areas. He looked at what he had. And the weakest areas he saw were ball handling and defense. His men were not getting into position to shoot very well. And they were not keeping the other team out very well.

Dolan had promised Brown the money to buy new and better players, but it was not Brown who would be deciding who they were. Ultimately, though Brown and Dolan would be consulted, that decision would be made by Isaiah Thomas, a basketball legend from twenty years ago who is now President of the Knicks. Supposedly, having played the game, he would know who to get. They'd rely on him and his aides.

As a result of this, the Knicks have bought two superstars. One is Stephon Marbury, a big man known for his shooting. Give him the ball. And the second one is — surprise! — another big player known for his shooting, Steve Francis. Give him the ball.

Both Dolan and Brown made the appropriate noises about how wonderful these two superstars would be for this team. You are paying for it. Go see them.

Marbury gets the ball and shoots. And mostly, because the positioning has not been set up by good ball handlers, he misses. Francis gets the ball and shoots. And mostly, because the positioning has not been set up by good ball handlers, he misses too. Then the Knicks just stand there flatfooted. And the other team, no matter who they may be, simply runs down the court and scores. In five of these last twenty-four games, the opposing team has run up absolutely embarrassing totals on the scoreboard, winning by twenty points and more.

And still James Dolan expresses great confidence in the future. And the truth is, it can't get any worse. So it has to go up. Doesn't it? After all, the "Miracle Mets" won the World Series in their seventh year in business.

Brown, once again hearing Dolan make his happy noises about the Knicks, had this to say to the press. "I don't know how he can say this after seeing us play."

Can't anybody play this game? •

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #389

'You are now entering a beaver free zone'

From last week's Shelter Island Reporter: "Beaver Carcass Found on Beach; Connecticut official blames heavy rain, floods in river systems"

Cute little story, seems innocent enough. But something smelled fishy to me. I don't need a flow chart to tell me that the ocean flows into and out of the LI Sound parallel to Long Island. Any beaver in the Sound would flow out into the ocean, if it wasn't eaten by the fish first. This beaver didn't stick up its tail for a sail and navigate around the North Fork to Shelter Island.

I read Connecticut's official explanation about how the heavy rains caused the rivers to overflow and apparently some wildlife got swept away and floated across the LI Sound, miraculously uneaten by sea life, only to land on the shores of Shelter Island.... a likely story.... I began putting things together. We get a big flow of cross island traffic every time the Cross Sound Ferry from Connecticut comes in...

I believe this is a test case, or rather a test beaver, smuggled across in a car via the Cross Sound Ferry and planted here on one of our beaches to evaluate the local reaction. Connecticut has a beaver population problem that they have kept secret (see Connecticut Beaver Fact Sheet at http://dep.state.ct.us/burnatr/wildlife/factshts/beaver.htm). As cars cross SI from Connecticut to the Hamptons, it probably occurred to someone that Connecticutters could help to alleviate their beaver population by having residents deposit a trunk load of beavers on Shelter Island with each crossing.

They're clever, these Connecticutters. They know that Shelter Islanders haven't read the Connecticut State Dept. Beaver Fact Sheet and aren't aware that beavers "can weigh anywhere between 30 to 65 pounds" [so they could take on Labradors, raccoons, or pound small children into the ground]...Connecticut citizens and communities are faced with the challenge of coexisting with beavers. This challenge involves efforts to minimize the problems beavers cause [AHA!!! I knew it!!!!]... Beavers are best known for their unique dam-building ability, which enables them to modify the habitat to meet their needs.... Because beavers have the ability to build dams to impound water, they can dramatically alter the environment in which they live [Ding ding ding!!! We have a winner!]. The problems beavers can cause fall into two main categories, tree cutting and flooding [just what we need more of on Shelter Island]...... beaver activity can threaten property, public health and safety. There are also instances when landowners are unwilling to tolerate any beaver activity on or near their property. [gee, what a shock!] Unfortunately, there are no known repellents that are effective against beavers and harassment generally does not cause beavers to abandon a site. [now you see the threat the beaver poses...] Removing nuisance beavers is not considered a viable option for alleviating beaver problems ...This costly technique only serves to move a problem from one site to another. In addition, ... relocated animals seldom stay in the area where they are released [unless you ship them to an island...]. Most importantly, moving beavers does not reduce the overall beaver population and, thus, does not reduce the number of complaints and damage...Historically, the Eastern "Sixteen Going on Seventeen," "So Long, Farewell," and of course the title song. The Baroness, to whom Captain von Trapp is engaged, conveniently steps aside, and a fabulous fairy tale wedding takes place, with the nuns of the Abbey attending from behind their convent gates. Things look very rosy until the Third Reich takes power in Austria and insists that the Captain return to his post in the Navy. This he cannot do, and so in a daring nighttime escape, the family flees on foot over the border to safety and a life of happily ever after.

It should also be noted that the story is based, a bit loosely, on the lives of the real von Trapp family, who did indeed escape the Nazis, though not so dramatically as in the movie, and spent many years touring as a family singing group (with the three additional children of Maria and the Captain) before opening a ski lodge in Stowe, Vermont, which Maria said reminded her of her home in Austria. It was there that she wrote her own book about her life, The Story of the Trapp Family Singers, and there that she died at the age of 82.

At 10:40 p.m. the star herself arrived, skipping onto the stage looking fit and trim, wearing an elegant black and white pantsuit, and, in truth, looking not very different from the Maria we had just been watching, despite having just celebrated her 70th birthday. She was accompanied by her daughter, Emma Walton, Education Director of Bay Street, who acted as interlocutor; the easy camaraderie between them was delightful to watch. Ms. Walton posed the carefully vetted and fairly predictable questions, and we learned that Ms. Andrews' favorite film is That's Life with Jack Lemmon and members of her family. The most difficult film, but the one of which she is most proud, is Duet for One, because it required her greatest effort. Her favorite song from the film is "Edelweiss," for its simplicity and charm, and her favorite scene is the love scene in the gazebo with co-star Christopher Plummer, because they could not stop giggling and had to retake many times, finally in silhouette so they were not so obviously laughing.

Several anecdotes were retold, some of which were also included in the Trivia Handout. Ms. Andrews recalled how in the opening scene there was a helicopter filming, and she was repeatedly blown to the ground by the backwash of the rotors until a change was made in the flight path. Poor Gretl could not swim, so in the capsizing boat scene, Gretl was supposed to be rescued by Maria, but it did not work out quite that way and a crewmember fished her out.

On a serious note Ms. Andrews revealed that she thinks her role, then and now, is to convey joy, to help her audience forget the cares of the world for a while. When asked what she would have been if not an actress and singer, she paused, then said she really had not had much choice (she was raised in a vaudevillian family and was on stage from an early age), and had not thought she was suited for much else, but to answer the question, she said she might have been a botanist; she loves her garden. Her advice to aspiring thespians is to be prepared; while luck and chance and connections play a large part in a person's success, you must be ready when the opportunity comes, which it may do most unexpectedly. She and the cast still stay in touch, and reunite at the anniversaries of the film; she has also done many more projects with co-star Christopher Plummer (even though he has been known to refer to the film as The Sound of Mucus). And finally, she listed her favorite things: her five children, seven grandchildren, and (hold on to your hats) her two great-grandchildren, as well as peanut butter, English tea, Switzerland, music, especially classical impressionists, her garden, and of course, Sag Harbor and the Bay Street Theater.

No hard questions were asked; no mention of co-stars who might have been irksome, no mention of the surgery that almost robbed her of her singing voice, no mention of difficulties and low spots in either her career or personal life. All in all, it was Julie Andrews as we want her to be; peppy, upbeat, positive, determined, cheerful, and beautiful. In short, one of our favorite things.

timber wolf was considered a major predator of beavers. However, wolves were extirpated shortly after the arrival of the colonists and are not likely to return to the highly-developed eastern landscape."

If the stupid little plover birds could hold up building a land bridge to Ram Island because they couldn't be effectively relocated, then beavers will extinguish all further building on Shelter Island. They'll take down trees without town board or private owner permission. They'll dam up wetlands so they can't be built on. We won't be able to shoot them, eat them and wear them because PETA will show up. And we are fresh out of eastern timber wolves!

Just as the ports of America must be protected, so must the ports of Shelter Island! I think the town should found an Island Port Authority to inspect all cross island traffic for bootleg beavers. We could have a trained wolf sniff the cars for contraband beavers. This is fair warning. If beavers get a tooth hold on Shelter Island, we will all be dammed...

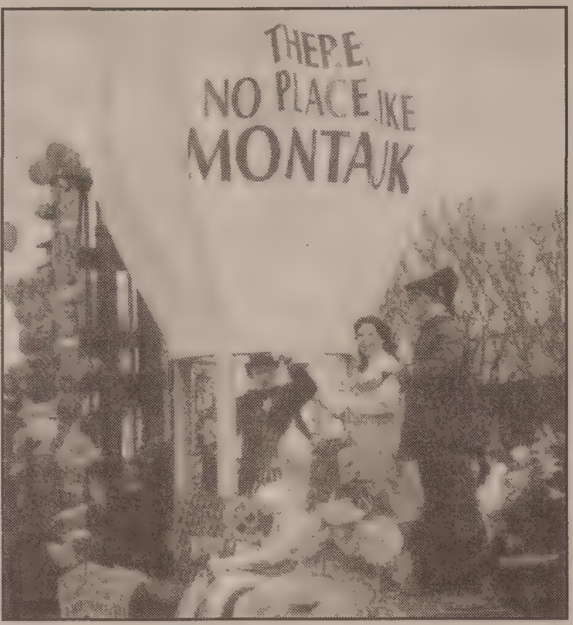
out to Montauk for the Annual Friends or Erin Cocktail Party to be held at Gurney's Inn.

The following weekend, Montauk will host its 44th annual parade, a boisterous event and Long Island's second largest St. Patty's Day parade. A little after high noon on March 19, the streets of Montauk are set to echo with the sounds of pipes and drums, as scores of fire companies and dozens of marching bands escort the meticulously constructed floats through the village. The parade is free to all, and draws thousands of revelers, all decked out in green, donning shamrocks and hats. The afternoon is often divided between watching the parade and patronizing local taverns. This is possibly Montauk's biggest day of the year.

That same weekend there will be yet another celebration. The day before, on Saturday, March 18th at noon, The Hampton Bays Annual St. Patrick's Day Parade will commence with Peconic War Pipes and Drums, the Pipe band of Hampton Bays. American Legion Post 924 will lead the parade with Mike Quinlan as the Grand Marshall and all are invited to march with the veterans.



One of the East End's most exciting celebrations is approaching so don't just sit at home reading James Joyce and eating Lucky Charms. Come out and join the party, sing along to Celtic tunes and knock your glasses together.

Just in case you were wondering whom you're toasting, Maewyn (St.) Patrick was born in Scotland in about 385, and after a childhood in slavery, is reputed to have converted entire kingdoms to Christianity, using the visual aid of a shamrock to explain the Holy Trinity to illiterate peasants.

Twentysomething

barking and wagging until you finally break down and smile and say, "What do you want boy? You want to chase a ball? Here, go get it!"

You then fake throw the ball which sends him barreling down the hallways at top speed, then catching his feet on a throw rug and sending him slamming into the wall. He rolls over, looks around and barks again. That was the best thing that ever happened to him today. Then he comes back wagging and barking looking for you to smack his face or wrestle him. I love these kinds of dogs. I am this dog.

On the other hand you have the ones that don't like this kind of activity. They are the dogs that bark when you enter the house, but then don't want to have anything to do with a ball or a smack. They are the cocker spaniels and the Chihuahuas. They just want to hang out on the couch and wait for you to join them to watch television. They like to be petted, but gently and if you are too rough with them, they won't hesitate for a second to snap at you with anger, then run off upstairs to another location where they can avoid your punishment. My brother is this dog.

How my brother and I can be from the same breed and be so different when it comes to play fighting is beyond me. If we were in the wild, things would be different, but since we are not, I look like the big idiot, twenty-three year old big brother that beats up on his little brother all the time. I'm telling you though, it's just instinct.

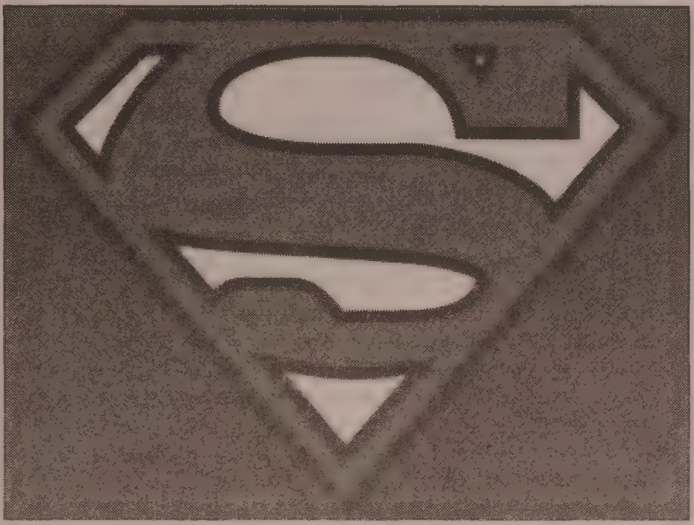
The North Fork Has A New Hero

A Man In Riverhead Rescues A Girl From A Burning Building

By R.B. Stuart



Anyone who's experienced a fire, no matter how small, knows just how frightening they can be. The feelings of helplessness and fear are omni present as is the uncertainty of the situation. A fire can rapidly turn from a home grease fire to complete devastation within minutes. It can result in monumental life-changing tragedies, whether of a physical nature, loss of property or both. These kinds of losses are equally painful psychologically and emotionally. In other words, a house fire is one of those things we would never wish upon anyone.

Tragedy, thankfully, was avoided last week for one family who suffered such a fire. A rescue was made on the North Fork. Anyone who rescues another in such unpredictable life changing circumstances, willingly and selflessly putting their life on the line for someone else they do not even know, deserves credit where credit is due. This is especially true when that person is not even a fireman. An individual that does this can easily be described as a hero, and that is just what we had in Riverhead last week.

A Riverhead man, Jack Russo, 63, a former physical education teacher, lent a hand to the Riverhead Fire Department when two fires overwhelmed them simultaneously. Russo just happened to be on his way to The Cooperage Inn in Baitng Hollow, where he was stopping to make reservations. In the distance he noticed smoke coming from a neighborhood that his daughter used to live in. He chose not to just keep driving and let the fire department take care of it, but instead he chose to see if he could help.

With urgency he sped over to where he saw the smoke. As the smoke got more and more potent, he could see a fire billowing from the back of a house. There were no fireman present, at least not yet, and Jack Russo knew he needed to act.

He parked his car and ventured over to the clouds of smoke. In just that instant the front door opened and 16-year-old Laura Sighinolfi appeared but was not exiting the house. Young Laura had been sick and stayed home from school. It dawned on Russo that the young girl wasn't aware the upper part of the house was starting to blaze. Jack immediately began to yell for the girl to get out of the house, at which point Laura cried out that her sister was upstairs.

Laura immediately ran away from the house and became frantic. She explained to Jack that her sister was upstairs in the burning building. Jack told Laura to remain outside and then he entered the house.

Russo was able to hear somebody talking upstairs on the telephone. 18-year-old Jennifer Sighinolfi was upstairs. He shouted at her to leave immediately but with panic in her voice she said she couldn't because flames had blocked the stairway and she was trapped. The only way that she could get out of the house was by jumping out the window, however it was a long fall.

Thinking fast, Russo asked if there was a ladder anywhere near the house. Jennifer then instructed him to the garage, where she believed that a ladder was located. At lightning speed Russo dashed to the garage forgetting that he had undergone several knee operations. He then clutched the ladder and charged back to the house where he leaned it against the siding below the second floor window.

Very carefully, Jennifer climbed out of the window and rushed down the steps where Russo and her sister were safely below. Standing on the snow-covered ground they awaited the arrival of the fire department, who were able to extinguish the blaze. The house did not survive and is going to have to be rebuilt; the kids inside the home, however, were safe and secure.

Jack's rescue of the two girls won him much praise by the Riverhead Fire Department who stated that without Russo coming to their aid at the time he did, even if she had jumped from the window, one or both girls could have been seriously injured.

The Signinolfi family suffered a great loss, as their home was destroyed and they will be living on the premises in a mobile home until they are able to rebuild. They are grateful that Russo was there to make a rescue.

The Signinolfi's are uncertain as to the cause of the fire, but a neighbor mentioned that recently a pile of mulch had spontaneously caught fire. Apparently, the fire began on the back deck of the Signinolfi home, and the strong winds, fanned the flames up against the rest of the house.

What is certain is Russo's bravery and eagerness to help and respond. In a day and age where it's difficult to get someone to lend a lady a helping hand, open a door for someone burdened with bags or let a fellow driver make a turn onto at busy street, we can still find people that do selfless acts. It's not difficult to do those things for others when you're a hero……and Mr. Russo is just that.

"M" Bring Merlot and Malbec to The Modern

Recently, The Modern, the Museum of Modern Art's (MoMA) fine dining restaurant started pouring "M" as its house red. Every restaurant has a house red, so what's the big deal?

Well, The Modern boasts a wine list of over 900 wines, but instead of choosing a wine from France or California as its house red, it stayed much closer to home, the North Fork of Long Island. Richard Olsen-Harbich, winemaker at Raphael in Peconic, and Stephane Colling, wine director at The Modern, developed "M," a custom blend of 95-percent Merlot and 5-percent Malbec from the 2003 vintage.

Colling, a native of the Alsace region of France, is a veteran of two three-star Michelin restaurants (Au Crocodile in Strasbourg and Michel Roux's The Waterside Inn in Bray, England). When asked why he chose Raphael and Olsen-Harbich for creating this wine he said, "I chose Long Island because we are in New York State and I'm not (just) looking for 'big' names. I think Long Island has a great potential. I tasted a few wines from Raphael about a year and a half ago before The Modern opened and kind of fell in love with the style of their wines. I saw a great potential in those wines, something different."

By the glass, "M" sells for $11 and it is $40 per bottle. But, do diners at The Modern turn up their nose at this Long Island wine? "Many are surprised but what is important is what they have in the glass. I sometimes just blind taste them, listen to them and 'teach' them a little bit. I don't like pre-conceived ideas," he commented. In fact, "M" is now his second most ordered wine by the glass.

In describing the wine to customers, Colling uses "Old World" and told me, "I compare the wine to the right bank of Bordeaux between Pomerol and St Emilion." High praise indeed, but after tasting the wine myself, not as crazy as it might sound.

The wine is dark crimson with a nice balance between dark berry fruit and toasty-smoky aromas on the nose. The soft, somewhat fruity palate is dominated by Merlot, but the 5% Malbec is what makes this wine special and reminiscent of Bordeaux. The Malbec brings complexity with earthy, tobacco and smoky notes. The tannins are gently gripping on the finish and it's easy to see this wine along side a wide array of dishes.

There are two important things I look for in any house wine — affordability and versatility — and this wine fits the bill.

Only 300 cases were produced, but Colling hopes to continue The Modern's relationship with Raphael, even if they "haven't spoken about it yet."

North Fork Artist of The Week

Painter, Richard Mizdal

By R.B. Stuart

Richard Mizdal's vibrant and soulful window frame and landscape paintings have been hanging on the walls of some of New York's accomplished since as early as the 1970s. Legendary opera singer Beverly Sills spotted one of Mizdal's window frame paintings and immediately commissioned him to paint the dunes viewed from the window of her Nantucket home. Other private collections grace the walls of Marilyn Horne, Doubleday Books president and publisher, Stephen Rubin, ABC news anchor Bill Beutel, and Variety editor Gerry Bryne to name a few. His unusual work has caught the eye of the director at The Guggenheim Museum and has produced two glowing reviews in the recent years by The New York Times. And within the last seven years Mizdol's work has adorned the cover at Dan's Papers thrice, most recently in January.

Mizdal says he's been painting his whole life. "Even as an infant I was always drawing, painting and making things," he remembered. "In Grammar school the nuns saw that I had an artistic ability and encouraged me to do special projects, like decorating the rooms for Christmas," Mizdal said.

As a child he knew he was going to be an artist when he grew up. "I was always making things, inventing always fascinated me," Mizdal admitted.

Mizdal was born 62 years ago in New Jersey where he was raised with one brother. He attended Montclair State University in NJ where he earned his B.A. in Fine Arts Education. He continued on to NYU where within one year he received his Masters in Creative Arts in Painting. "I studied extremely hard and within two semesters earned my masters. Then without warning I was drafted into Vietnam. I was sent right into the thick of things. When you first arrive they ask you to fill out a dream sheet. After reading it a Lieutenant called out my name in the barracks and asked me if I could write a coherent sentence and if I knew how to photograph and develop film. I said yes. He said come with me and gave me the position of combat correspondent. I did that for 348 days, 16 hours and 48 minutes……but who's counting," he reflected with laughter.

"I loved that job, but it was very dangerous. It taught me what photojournalism was all about and to see photographically. This is what I teach my students at Riverhead Community College."

He has been teaching different forms of visual arts there for 15 years.

Mizdal moved to Greenport four years ago where he feels "fortunate" to have a studio in Peconic Landing. He finds fulfillment in the knowledge, "That my work is good and growing,"

What he loves about painting is the process. "Discovering a different level of meaning or achievement in your artistic statement. It's not just a question of expression……it's about raising the level of reality to a higher plane. I think that's the artist's responsibility," he states.

Mizdal finds challenges, "In the ability to keep working. Because there are times when society isn't as interested in your art as they may have been. In the 1980s, I couldn't paint fast enough for galleries. Now because of the economy people aren't that interested in art. You really have to believe in yourself."

Mizdal is inspired by the work of other artists as well as nature. The great works of Dieben Korn, Bonnard, Edward Hopper, and Monet, have influenced him.

Usually, artists don't do or don't enjoy doing commissioned work, but not Mizdal. He enjoys working with people and finding where their sensibilities lie. "I think there's enough colors on my palette to accommodate their vision as well as mine," Mizdal concluded. If you've missed seeing his exhibits in New York, New Jersey or Florida over the last 35 years, six of his life size paintings can be seen in Riverhead at the East End Arts Council in the "Favorite Places" exhibit until March 25th. He can be reached through Cecily's Love Lane Gallery in Mattituck at 631-298-8610.

Updating Snowbirds With All The Big North Fork News

By Phyllis Lombardi

Phones are ringing all over the North Fork. "Hi, we're back." "Hello, we're home." "It's me. Back again." Yes, the snowbirds are returning and after sorting their mail and checking out the house, they're calling friends they left up north and on ice.

I got such a call last night. The dishes were washed and I was ready for the evening's inactivity, when the phone rang and I thought it was one of my children. Let's see, what could this be about? Car trouble for one son? The high cost of reading glasses for another? (He's 43 and just got his first pair, what does he know!)

Or was it my daughter? Her kids, my outstanding teen grandchildren, still won't walk my dog Duke without a battle.

"Hello? Jean!"

It was my friend Jean who just got back from Florida. I settled in at our Cutchogue kitchen table, happy my husband was in another room deep in a new-old book about Gil Hodges. (Yeah, it's that time of year, too.) Jean and I had some serious and lengthy talking to do. It was at that very moment I heard, or thought I did, hundreds of phones ringing from Riverhead through Laurel on to East Marion and all the way to Orient. In every little town, friends were picking up phones in a kind of welcome-home ritual.

Do we all talk about the same things? Probably.

We talk health first. Not bad, not bad. Jean's foot was still bothering her but just a little. Husbands were well too. Although still eating all the wrong stuff.

With that out of the way, we zeroed in on the grandchildren. Jean's youngest grandson was visiting for a few days and the whole family had been to Atlantis Marine World in Riverhead that morning. Another grandchild lives just a few homes away from Grandma Jean. That little girl would be over for a fistful of Grandma-cookies early tomorrow morning. As for me, Brian, my oldest grandchild, is 16 and just got a learner's permit. Don't worry. He lives several states away.

From grandchildren we went on to discuss other youngsters. Scott Russell, for one. What was the new Southold Town supervisor up to while Jean was away? There's so much she has to catch up with. Of course Jean did notice our new Main Road. Who wouldn't? The orange cones are gone and traffic is flowing smoothly. Finally. Jean had even visited the just-built CVS in Mattituck. Big time North Fork event, not to missed.

And what's the story with Sunrise Bus? Jean wasn't sure she cared for a Hampton logo-ed bus traveling along our roads. Ah, Jean, I guess we can't be so provincial. Things change, I say. Jean mumbled that she'd think about it.

But what about Cross Sound Ferry? Any news on that? Oh, and Jean wanted to know why Central Suffolk Hospital is now Peconic Bay Medical Center. Seems like you can't go away for a day.

Do all returning snowbirds inquire about sewing projects? Maybe not. But Jean's in the middle of a quilt adventure, as am I. Trouble with Jean, though, is she completes her projects, one at a time. I always have several going, several incomplete. But joy of joys, a fabric store opened its doors in Riverhead last month. There's lots of parking and a view of the Peconic River. Jean and I plan a visit next Monday.

And we talked of our work at a North Fork thrift shop. Jean volunteers on Wednesdays and is returning there this week. I volunteer on Saturdays. Boy, it's good to have the old crew back

Old is right. I had another birthday on a cold February day. Jean was away and so her sunny southern greeting came with a promise of a belated birthday lunch on her return. We're going out of town for that, over to Shelter Island.

We've got lots more to talk about. What are we reading? And are we practicing the piano as faithfully as we said we would? Surely we'll do more swimming this summer. Do you think it's too cool to do some planting? Let's go to Southold to get some seeds and stop in the gift shop to see how Edith is feeling. I can't wait to pick rhubarb and asparagus while Jean is apple-happy. (She'll have to wait for that.)

Yes, we all have to wait for most everything. But wait long enough and all North Fork phones will ring. Both those who call and those who answer may realize life is indeed a series of comings and goings. For now, though, welcome home, good friends.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

NEW YORK'S DOWNTOWN ART SCENE: THE GERSHWIN HOTEL AND GREY GALLERY

Pick-me-ups from the cold weather are not only available on the East End, as noted in last week's column, but also in Manhattan. One particular art venue is a real surprise, unknown to all but guests at The Gershwin Hotel in the Flatiron district.

The exterior, designed by Finnish architect Stefan Lindfors, is the first thing that strikes our eye: a red facade with three-dimensional forms protruding from the windows. What's especially striking is their resemblance to the pods seen in the 1950s film, Invasion of the Body Snatchers.

The modern ambience is continued in the lobby with the sofas, typical of the sleek but simple Finnish style. Yet it soon becomes apparent that the art on the walls is pure American, often Pop Art and other examples from the 1970s and 1980s avant-garde. For example, consider the small Warhol self-portrait and Campbell's soup can by the elevator.

Each floor (and each guest room) has artwork too. On the seventh floor, there are works by Keith Haring and Jean-Michael Basquiat. There are also photographs of the era which serve as a pictorial history, the eleventh floor featuring images by Anton Perich (Max's Kansas City and John Waters among them). Other floors have images of Ultra Violet and Studio 54, important reminders from our cultural past.

The overall effect is fascinating and invigorating, most particularly because despite the contradictory styles evoked by The Gershwin's exterior and interior, there's still a clarity and coherence we can't explain.

New York University's Grey Gallery is presenting its "Down-town Show," featuring works with some of the very same subject matter that graces the walls of The Gershwin, including photographic tributes to the restaurant, Max's Kansas City. Other salient pieces from the 1970s and 1980s by Chuck Close, David Salle and Cindy Sherman are also notable because the artists are East End residents.

The exhibit's importance is obvious as it pays homage to a time and place (the East Village) that has left a distinguished mark on contemporary art history as well as on diverse artistic achievements. The show also allows us to view pieces that reflect an artist's aesthetic evolution.

Favorites include Laurie Anderson's woven newspaper collage, where English and Chinese are juxtaposed, and William Wegman's 1976 landscape, which conveys only words (recalling works by East End's Stephanie Brody Lederman).

David Salle's abstraction is also arresting as is Sherrie Levine's "After Schiele," a grostesque figure reminiscent of the great Austrian Expressionist. Robert Longo's charcoal dancer from an extreme bird's-eye- view is also memorable. The entire exhibit, in fact, is memorable.

The Gershwin Hotel is located at 7 East 27th Street. "The Downtown Show" is at 100 Washington Square East until April 1.

HONORING THE ARTIST: ELLEN FRANK

Among other things, Eastern Long Island is known for its birds. But such creatures are famous in their own right, as subjects of mythology, poetry and popular culture. (Who can ever forget Hitchcock's movie, The Birds?)

In real life, birds come and go, as they do in their yearly migration to Capistrano. Yet to cover artist Ellen Frank, birds come but they don't go: not in her mind nor her imagination. Or in her paintings. Simply put, such featured friends have become a part of Ms. Frank's aesthetic and personal iconography.

Consider, for example, that Ms. Frank lives near the water and is, therefore, privy to the wild life existing there. She recalls as if it were yesterday that "My first body of work here in East Hampton was conceived at Louse Point." Another early work was titled, "Let the Birds Sing."

Birds have assumed other meanings for Ms. Frank through the years. This week's cover, for example, features shore birds that may or may not be real according to the specialized technique that Ms. Frank used in conceptualizing the image. Thus, birds show that the "object and their reflection are the same."

The cover, "Song of the Longshoremen," also indicates aspects of the artist's methods, namely a particular mix of the color blue which she recalls seeing for the first time at twilight in Florence, Italy. Asked about other sources for her brand of blue, Ms. Frank names a favorite book, On Being Blue, from which the title of her painting comes. Even the tiles in her home are blue. "I'm in love with cobalt," Ms. Frank says, summing it all up quickly.

Regarding Ms. Frank's penchant for birds as "agents of peace," a most important subject is evoked: a new exhibit, "Cities of Peace," and its connection to Ms. Frank's new not-for-profit-foundation, the Ellen Frank Illumination Arts Foundation, Inc., which has far-reaching implications. "First, the show, which had its debut in New York, will travel to other counties, world-wide," says Ms. Frank, her enthusiasm invigorating. "The project's overall theme is to turn 'anguish into beauty'; it features paintings of seven cities including Hiroshima, New York, Jerusalem and Baghdad.

Such a task took an enormous amount of work, and that's where the foundation that Ms. Frank spearheaded played a part. "We had people who researched the history of each place, its symbols, everything," she explains.

The foundation has assumed other salient philosophical goals: using art as a tool for peace; reaching out to diverse religions; addressing non-military solutions to conflict. Its practical objectives involve establishing an Illumination Atelier where people can learn the art and craft of illumination and where they eventually can come to have their own pieces illuminated.

In the meantime, Ms. Frank proceeds with supervising interns from all over the world and creating new illuminated works of art, including "Hannukah Illuminated: A Book of Days."

Asked where this foundation might eventually have its center, Ms.Frank answers succinctly and with relevance: "Wherever birds land, that's where the Foundation will be."

Entertainment In The Hamptons

preview: guild hall honors at the rainbow room

This weekend, artists and patrons will crowd Manhattan's famed Rainbow Room for what will surely be a tremendous celebration. At Guild Hall's 20th Annual Lifetime Achievement Awards, the Academy of the Arts will present a Special Lifetime Achievement Patron of the Arts Award for leadership and philanthropic endeavors to Stephen A. Schwarzman, while paying tribute to recipients from the past 20 years, many of which who will be in attendance. Another highlight will be a riveting performance by two-time Tony Award Winner and Kennedy Center honoree – the incomparable Chita Rivera, living theater legend, and star of the current Broadway hit Chita Rivera: A Dancer's Life. The night will be hosted by Angela La Greca of ABC's "The View," a six-time MAC Award winner and comedian, and one of Guild Hall's favorite funny ladies.

Guild Hall was established in 1931 and has since remained at the center of the artistic community on the East End. It hosts a plethora of programs designed to cultivate and inspire this artistic spirit from exhibitions and lectures, to film series, workshops and live performances, proving an invaluable pillar of innovative thought and creativity in our small community.

Twenty years ago, Guild Hall's Board of Trustees began a series of annual awards to honor those who have proved invaluable members of our community. That year a distinguished jury convened to designate their first three distinguished candidates. In that jury were heavyweights like Roy Lichtenstein, Wilfred Sheed, Peter Jennings, Elaine Steinbeck and Sidney Gruson, who elected Willam de Kooning , Kurt Vonnegut and Alan Alda as the first recipients of "Medals of Merit." In 1986, the following year, a formal Academy of the Arts was established, using the original jury as its nucleus and the legacy continues to this day. Each year, the recipients of the awards are added to the academy's roster, which, over the years, has expanded to over two hundred names of some of the finest artists, writers, and performers in contemporary America. In 1992, a fourth award was added to this precious fraternity of talent, honoring those who have proved Lifelong Patrons of the Arts.

While many of Guild Hall's traditions have remained in tact, an exciting new format delineates the event this year. This year's gala will not only pay tribute to this year's honoree, but also to more than 70 artists who have been singled out over the past 20 years for sustained excellence in their field. The night will gather some of the greatest living talents of our time and pay tribute the memory of those who have passed. Surely the swank soiree will be a venerable who's who in arts and letters, hosting members of an extraordinary collective of talent on the East End. Previous award recipients include such luminaries as: Edward Albee, Alan Alda, Lauren Bacall, Alec Baldwin, Louis Begley, Chuck Close, Cy Coleman, Wilhem de Kooning, Eric Fischl, Jane Freilicher, Betty Friedan, April Gornik, Sheldon Harnick, Sidney Lumet, Itzhak Perlman, George Plimpton, Larry Rivers, Jerome Robbins, Marshall Rose, Cindy Sherman, Steven Spielberg, Robert A. M. Stern, Elaine Stritch, Kurt Vonnegut and Mort Zuckerman.

However, it is Stephen A. Schwarzman, Chairman, CEO and co-founder of The Blackstone Group, and reputable arts patron who will be individually honored this year. Mr. Schwarzman is a prominent businessman and philanthropist who began his career at Lehman Brothers, where he was elected Managing Director in 1978 at the age of 31 and has been involved in all phases of his firm's development since its founding in 1985. He is Chairman of the Board of The John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, member of the Council on Foreign Relations and is on the boards of various organizations, including the New York Public Library, the New York City Ballet, the Film Society of Lincoln Center, the Harvard Business School Visiting Committee, the JP Morgan Chase National Advisory Board and the New York City Partnership Board of Directors, to name just a few. He holds a BA from Yale University and an MBA from Harvard Business School and has served as an adjunct professor at the Yale School of Management.

Following the ceremony will be Chita Rivera's per-review: grey gardens...by gordin & christiano

Playwright Horizons is presenting the World Premiere of the new musical Grey Gardens, inspired by the Maysles Brothers' 1975 cult classic documentary of the same name, and based on two of East Hampton's most notorious recluses, Edith Bouvier Beale and her daughter Little Edie, the "It Girl" of her generation. Often referred to as Big Edie and Little Edie and known to the world as the aunt and cousin, respectively, of Jackie Kennedy Onassis, the women lived in Grey Gardens, a 28-room mansion on West End Road off Georgica Beach.

Making Broadway musicals from famous films has become a common practice, but turning a documentary about an eccentric mother and daughter living in decrepit squalor into a musical seems an impossible task. The creative team of Grey Gardens has done an amazing job. The inventive staging has been directed by Michael Greif, a Tony nominee for Rent, and has music by Scott Frankel, with lyrics by Michael Korie.

The musical features an absorbing book by Pulitzer Prize winning playwright Doug Wright (I Am My Own Wife) that is a fascinating, even thought-provoking; study of the indomitable women who are a unique piece of East Hampton history. The poignant story depicts their symbiotic love/hate relationship, and although the two bickered throughout their lives, they sustained themselves with a love for each other, and a mutual joy of singing Broadway show tunes.

Mr. Wright has expanded upon the documentary, which focuses on the women at their family home in 1974, by giving us a somewhat fictionalized first act set in 1941, when Grey Gardens was still glorious. He recreates the summer day of a planned party to announce Little Edie's (a marvelous Sara Gettelfinger) engagement to Joseph Patrick Kennedy Jr. (a good Matt Cavenaugh), who was being groomed to be President. Little Edie was a young debutante then, a star in the Social Register, who was known to members of the Maidstone Club as "The Body Beautiful."

When Act I begins, we discover Edith Bouvier Beale (a superb Christine Ebersole) in the elegant living room of Grey Gardens. She is rehearsing with her musical accompanist George Gould (a likeable Bob Stillman) the songs she will sing at "Little" Edie's engagement party. They await the Kennedy family from Boston, as well as "Big" Edie's husband, who is expected on the 5:15 train from New York.

Christine Ebersole and Matt Cavenaugh

Joe Kennedy Jr. and Little Edie appear to be madly in love, as her grandfather Major Bouvier (an excellent John McMartin) hovers approvingly in the background practicing his golf stroke. Their butler, Brooks (a warm Michael Potts), is arranging the final party details, and the young sisters, Jackie and Lee Bouvier (the lovely Sarah Hyland and the charming Audrey Twitchell), are scurrying around.

With the dynamics of the mother/daughter relationship established, the first act ends with "Little" Edie fleeing to Manhattan, when her engagement is suddenly broken off because of her mother's careless remark.

The second act takes place just after the Suffolk County Board of Health condemned the house in 1973. Jackie Kennedy Onassis rescued the women from eviction by giving them money to partially restore the place. The Maysles Brothers filmed their legendary documentary of the then 81-year-old Edith and her 58-year-old daughter singing and dancing for their cameras in the improved surroundings.

The musical staging of the second act recreates that filming, but the audience becomes the camera, as we are invited in for a guided tour of the squalid conditions and the women's outrageous behavior. In a smart casting twist, Christine Ebersole, who played Big Edie in Act I, now plays the mature Little Edie brilliantly. Mary Louise Wilson is superb as the elderly Big Edie. If this sounds confusing, it isn't. It's fabulous! Capturing the bizarre spirit of the film, the strangely compelling story of Act II provides a touching look at their broken dreams.

The splendid music of the first act is a loving nod to the original 1940s show tunes that echo not only the standards and style of all the great American composers, but the personalities of the main characters as well, while moving the story along with clever exposition. The second act music is edgier and darker with outrageous lyrics that expose the women's conflicts and zaniness in oddly moving ways. "Will You?" and "Another Winter in a Summer Town" are haunting, and don't be surprised if you find yourself singing "Peas in a Pod."

Allen Moyer's fashionable set turns into a dilapidated ruin in Act II, mirroring the haunting turn of events. The costumes by William Ivey Long are perfect. Bravo to everyone, but Christine Ebersole anchors the evening with an astonishing performance first as Big Edie and later as Little Edie.

Grey Gardens opened at Playwrights Horizons, 416 West 42nd Street, on March 7th, 2006 for a limited run through April 9th. For tickets call Ticket Central at 212-279-4200 or online at www.playwrightshorizons.org.

Dave Evans' MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

Failure To Launch

Trip (Matthew McConaughey) is a successful thirty-something who refuses to fly the nest. Sarah Jessica Parker's Paula is the honey-trap hired by his parents to finally lure him into growing up. Lo and behold, the two fall for one another and so on and so forth. Kathy Bates, as Trip's mother, is simply too good for this dross.

The Hills Have Eyes

It hardly seems necessary to re-make Wes Craven's 1977 classic, but it's a welcome break from saccharine nonsense. The Carter family heads out into the desert and following an ill-advised turn into the wilderness, find themselves stalked by a clan of raging psychopaths. It's no Texas Chainsaw Massacre, but gruesome and diverting all the same.

The Shaggy Dog

In the land where sitcom stars come to die, The Shaggy Dog at least has pedigree. Tim Allen and "Sex and the City's" Kristin Davis star in the story of Dave Douglas, a man who occasionally turns into a large, longhaired dog. Hilarity allegedly ensues. Director Brian Robbins (anyone remember Varsity Blues?) takes the helm for this lazy sham.

Dave Chappelle's Block Party

An unusual combination of comedian Dave Chappelle and director Michel Gondry (at his most accessible with Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind), the film is a kind of musical-stand-up-documentary. Chappelle pulls together an impressive line-up of stars to accompany him, including a reunited Fugees, but it is his charisma that truly drives the film. Comic genius.

16 Blocks

Richard Donner, director of the esteemed Lethal Weapon tetralogy, takes the helm for this better-than-average buddy movie. Bruce Willis plays Jack Mosley, a world-weary cop assigned to transport a witness to the courthouse. Predictably trouble comes every which way. Willis is his usual charming self, while Mos Def, as the witness, is becoming an actor to really watch.

Aquamarine

Okay, it would be ludicrous to claim that this story about two twelve-year-old girls and a mermaid was anything but kitsch with a very limited audience. That said, there is something nice about the earnest cheapness of the whole affair. The screenwriters are fresh from TV ("Sex and the City," and less impressively "Joey"), it's the director's first feature, and neither girl is Dakota Fanning.

Ultraviolet

Late in the 21st century, a sub-section of humanity has become infected with a disease that turns them into some sort of vampires. A war is looming between these Hemophages and the normal, uninfected populace. Absurdly silly, of course, and there are grumbles that the special effects are not all they could be, but it moves quickly and Milla Jovovich is suitably enigmatic in the title role.

Eight Below

Two explorers find themselves stranded in the Antarctic following an accident. Their dogs escape into a nature-film sequence, leaving the men to struggle back to camp. Paul Walker may be a pretty face but this alone is not enough to sustain the soul-searching that the story requires. This is Frank Marshall's first time in the director's seat since 1995's Congo. It has not been worth the wait.

Curious George

The children's classic comes to the screen in simple but effective animated form. Of course nothing will stop the chorus of voices crying that this is sacrilege, but at worst this is harmless and at best, charming. Will Ferrell, Drew Barrymore and David Cross (from "Arrested Development") provide the voices.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

The White Countess & A Good Woman

THE WHITE COUNTESS

The heady mix of passion, repression, love, fear, and desire blended with class clashes and unsettled political unrest, served up with impeccable tastiness and only occasionally stained by a tear or two jerked from perfect actors, has been the chief product of the collaboration of director James Ivory and producer Ismail Merchant. The glistening, highly polished period pieces, sweep through delicately romanticized times with style and sensibility, leaving a legacy of films labeled by James Wolcott as "white linen." The passing of Mr. Merchant last May may well mark the demise of this type of quiet, quality-crafted minor gems which tweak the bleached purity of over-starched bed linens. The final Merchant-Ivory release, The White Countess, seems to signal that time, for their admirable endeavors were slipping through the dated hour glass with the urgency of wind-blown sands of time, blanketing sluggish, sinking objects.

The "Countess" is Sofia Belinsky, portrayed by Natasha Richardson in the same lush visual style in which Merchant-Ivory saturated their work. She and her mother and aunt, played by Vanessa and Lynn Redgrave, are former Russian aristocrats exiled by the Bolshevik Revolution to a seedy existence in Shanghai. It is the 1930s. Sophia's bread-winning work for her family is as a dance hall hostess, and there's a hint, too, of prostitution. ("M and I" are forever discreet). Mama and Auntie are openly disgusted by the work, however. They should learn more tolerance – they have another two hours or so to go of love, desire, repression, intrigue, and WAR! as Japan invades China. The love, desire and repression are provided by the ever-fine Ralph Fiennes. He is a bored diplomat and blind. He meets Natasha when she protects him from being mugged at the dance hall. Always wanting to be a nightclub owner, he opens a classy "Rick's Place" and gives her a prime job there. Here is where the repression fills the screen. The two "lovers" have a pact: They will not get too involved. Well, anyway – China does not have a pact with Japan, this is where war comes in. Intrigue enters into all this with Fiennes' associate, mysteriously done by Hiroyuki Sanada. It is all fashionably elegant, and its star-crossed lovers don't go too far. This might be your last chance to lose yourself in this grand expertise.

As an example of a period piece gone to pieces in klutzy mismanagement you might want to see A Good Woman. It's about as out-of-kilter as a period piece could be – period! Its production team attempts to crossbreed its characters (yet again) mixing and matching in sunny Italy. Aren't we fed up with this premise? Let's accept the scenic exotic visuals even though they can be seen in aromatic pizzerias throughout the country on oily walls. Let's be concerned with casting United States Hollywoodians to stumble around awkwardly in arenas owned and operated by the Brits. Then compound that by taking Oscar Wilde's masterful play Lady Windermere's Fan by taking it out of a Victorian parlor and plunking it on a seaside resort you-know-where. The play's year 1892 is updated to the 1930s and three of its London drawing room inhabitants converted into rugged American outdoorsy types whose tongues trip awkwardly over Wilde's wit. His cutting repartee is dulled to a blunt butter knife's inadequacy by – let's name names:

Helen Hunt is Mrs. Erlynne. She's been driven out of New York on a rail by the wives of men she has vamped. In Italy, she hits on Mark Umbers as Robert Windemere. He's just married Scarlett Johnson. She in turn is being hit upon by Lord Darlington played with genuine English quick-of-tongue aptness by Stephen Campbell Moore. Another fellow who's right at home within the company of Oscar Wilde's platinum word usage is Tom Wilkinson as Lord "Tuppy" Augustus. He's pursuing the predatory Helen Hunt, who's not even a convincing femme fatale. "Tuppy" realizes she's in it for the money. Is she?

This film's gaucheness reminds us of Wilde's comment, "America is the only country that went from barbarism to decadence without civilization in between." The filmmakers had nothing between one era and the other.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

It's kind of refreshing to be introduced to a new recipe or two – or at least recipes that haven't run the circuit. Rocio Argote, a young Peruvian woman, recently shared some of her family's ethnic recipes with me. The dishes were so delicious I was delighted to duplicate them at home.

Lomo saltado, sautéed beef with potatoes served with rice, is a typical Peruvian dish, according to Rocio. The dish consists of cooking each ingredient individually in the same pan, then layering it to be reheated when ready to eat. Essentially this is a one dish meal – or almost. The rice is cooked separately to serve with the meat and potatoes and I love the technique of cooking the rice. It couldn't be simpler – but then again cooking rice is always a simple procedure. The recipe begins with sautéeing a bit of chopped garlic in oil, rice is stirred in to coat and water is brought to the boil. Fifteen minutes later the rice is cooked with a crust formed at the bottom of the pan. If you think about it, any paella worth its salt is praised when the rice sticks to the bottom of the pan.

Pollo y fideos is so simple it's almost like cheating when cooking. Simmer the ingredients for the sauce and bury the chicken pieces in it until done. How easy is that? Serve it over boiled fideos, thin Spanish noodles, for a satisfying late winter treat. Hope you enjoy Rocio's recipes as much as I did.

PERUVIAN BEEF, POTATO AND RICE STEW

This unusual combination of serving potatoes and rice (not for the carbo-phobic) in the same dish is a typical Peruvian peasant dish. The recipe can be prepared ahead and reheated before serving.

Serves 4

1/4 cup Canola oil
2 Russet potatoes cut for French fries
3/4 pound tip beef round cut into 3/8 inch cubes
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1 large onion, thinly sliced
2-3 plum tomatoes cut into chunks
1/4 cup finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley

1. Heat oil in a large, 10-12-inch, heavy skillet and put in the potatoes to fry until golden brown, about 5-6 minutes. Toss them around the pan to cook evenly. Transfer potatoes with slotted spoon to a large bowl. Put the meat in the skillet the potatoes cooked in and sauté, stirring occasionally, until the meat loses its red color. Season the meat with salt and pepper and transfer to the potatoes in the bowl.

2. Add the onion to the skillet the potatoes and meat cooked in and sauté, stirring occasionally for 3-4 minutes. Add the tomatoes, season with salt and pepper and cook for 2-3 minutes longer. Transfer to the meat and potatoes. When ready to serve return all the ingredients to the skillet, garnish with parsley and warm over low heat. Spoon over crispy Peruvian rice and serve.

RICE, PERUVIAN STYLE

This is such a quick and easy rice recipe – you must try it! The rice cooks in a small amount of water so that a crust forms in the bottom of the pot. After serving the deliciously crunchy rice it will be necessary to soak the pot in hot sudsy water to clean it. It's worth it!

Serves 4

1 cup rice, preferably basmati
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 – 3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 cup plus 2 tablespoons cold water
Coarse (kosher) salt

1. Put the rice in a sieve and rinse well under cold water.

2. Heat the oil in a medium saucepan and put in the garlic. Sauté the garlic about 30-40 seconds or just until golden. Put in the rice, toss to coat in the oil and add the water. Bring the water to a boil and season with salt to taste. Adjust heat to a brisk simmer. Cover the pan and cook about 15 - 18 minutes until rice is cooked and a crust forms in the bottom of the pot. Rice will stay hot in the pot for up to 30 minutes. Serve as a base for the Peruvian beef.

ROCIO'S POLLO Y FIDEOS

To prep ahead for this savory Peruvian dish cut a small criss-cross opposite the stem end of the tomatoes, then drop in boiling water for 20-30 seconds, rinse under cold water; the peel will come off easily. Cut in half through the circumference and squeeze out the seeds then chop coarsely. Scrape the carrots, cut coarsely and puree in a food processor.

Serves 4

1 chicken, cut into eighths
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 medium red onion, finely chopped
4 large plum tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped
3 carrots, scraped and chopped coarsely
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
3/4 pound fideos or angel hair pasta
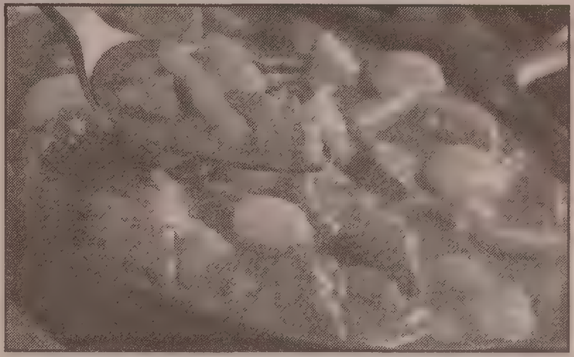
2 -3 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley, optional



1. Trim, wash and dry chicken parts with paper towels. Warm oil in a 10-12-inch skillet and put in the onion. Sauté onion for 3-4 minutes until tender and add the tomatoes and carrot puree. Season with salt and pepper, cover the pan and let simmer about 15 minutes. The sauce can be completely prepared ahead to this point.

2. Bring a large pot of water to the boil and add salt to taste. Meanwhile, submerge the chicken pieces in the sauce and simmer with cover ajar. If there isn't enough liquid in the sauce add enough water to keep the chicken pieces covered. Cook the breast pieces about 15 - 18 minutes and cook the legs and thighs 5 to 8 minutes longer. In the last 5 minutes or so put the fideos in the boiling water to finish cooking about the same time as the chicken.

3. Drain the fideos and divide among 4 plates. Top with chicken pieces according to diners wishes and spoon over the sauce. Sprinkle over chopped parsley if desired.

JUST FOR KIDS

EAST END KID:
WANNADO

BY EMILY HART POST
WITH A LITTLE HELP FROM KATLEAN DE MONCHY AND DAVID POST

I went with my dad to Wannado City near Fort Lauderdale, in Florida. It is a very cool place, where kids can try different jobs in this city run by the kids. There were about 40 different jobs and in every one the kids are doing the work and getting paid (although dad told me that the money doesn't work outside the park). First I was a dentist and got to floss a fake patient. Then I was an archaeologist and went digging for King Tut treasure. Then I took a little vacation and played some games and went on some rides (that cost me money). Then I went into Cartoon Network and was an on-air personality, introducing show and tell. We bought a video of the TV show and maybe one day if I follow mom into TV, I can show this as my first audition tape. It is a real fun place. I wanted to be a firefighter, but the line was too long. So next time?

When In Manhattan...

BY OLIVER PETERSON

Union Square

When it comes to the city, I've always been more of a Downtown guy. The definition of "Downtown" is, of course, relative, but in my world that means below 14th Street. Below 14th conjures images of tattoo shops, record stores, vintage clothing, punk rock, blues bars, bodegas, and kosher food, but just beyond the border in the Uptown of my universe, things become a tad more refined. Union Square maintains hip, but it's also a little more grown up, a step in the yuppie direction, and feels like the right place to walk your dog with the wife, pick up produce for the company who are coming to dinner, or have lunch with your boss to discuss that promotion. It just doesn't quite carry that forty-ounce on the stoop vibe held by the "real" Downtown. Union Square Park may be host to a McDonald's and a Virgin Megastore, but it's a cool area with a lot of things to see and do.

The 3.6-acre park is an oval-shaped central location to the surrounding businesses and sights, it's located at 14th and Broadway, and is open to the public. Union Square Park has some nice lawns, lined with benches, for those who want to take a break and kick up their feet, but also provides pavement walkways to easily pass through. It was opened in 1839, and swiftly became a favorite location for large-scale public meetings. Due to the popularity of gatherings there, the architects responsible for much of Central Park – Frederick Law Olmsted (also a founder of The Nation magazine) and Calvert Vaux – redesigned Union Square Park in 1871. The iron fence was removed and sidewalks were expanded to accommodate the crowds. In 1882 the park became the site of the nation's first Labor Day celebration. One would imagine that filling the less than four acres with much of New York's population was a lot like East Hampton on the same holiday. A parade marched up Broadway and, by 1894, Grover Cleveland signed legislation honoring Labor Day as a national holiday.

Today Union Square is a busy transfer spot for the MTA subway. The 4, 5, 6, L, N, R, Q, and W lines all stop there. This makes it a convenient place to set off for other locations around the city. The underground station is large, and its creation actually caused the park to be completely destroyed in the late 20s. It has since been updated. In 1985 new kiosks and lighting were installed after years of misuse, neglect and drug activity compromised the usefulness and safety of the station. Union Square, like Manhattan, is quite different now. Aside from the previously mentioned corporate entities in the vicinity, it has a rich population of residents, employees, and over one hundred thousand students enrolled in area colleges and universities. There are more architects in the neighborhood than any other place in the city, and with 6 nearby hospitals and numerous healthcare providers, Union Square gets over 1 million patient visits per year. There are 10 local theaters and more top restaurants than anywhere in Manhattan, but one of the best things to do in Union Square is hit the Greenmarket Farmers Market. On Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays from 8 a.m. - 6 p.m. year round, farmers and vendors from upstate and as far as Pennsylvania come to the park to sell fresh produce, flowers, fish, meat, baked goods, cider, and even rare books. Out here, we're flush with farmers markets, but it's a real treat in the city. On a beautiful spring Saturday, it's not unusual for over 50 thousand visitors to pass through the market. Personally, I like to watch the skateboarders – who are basically ubiquitous in Union Square these days – or visit Forbidden Planet, the inveterate New York comic shop that is part of a dying breed. I also recommend you visit the statues of George Washington and Gandhi while you're gallivanting about. They can remind you to be peaceful and honest in a city that might not always inspire such traits.

It's not that the park itself is mindblowing or anything, but Union Square is really a neighborhood worth visiting. The food is good, the people are mostly sane, and there are quite a few good places to shop. Walk around, make sure it's a Farmers Market day, and you'll see what I'm talking about.

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

The Big Loop in East Hampton

Here is another great hike (9 miles!) to take from the proposed trailhead at Edward's Hole Road and CR 114.

Park on the shoulder of CR 114, near the entrance of Edwards Hole Road, and head north following the white rectangles of the Paumanok Path. This trail takes you through a pitch pine, oak woods that gradually become predominantly white pine. After approximately a half-mile there are some isolated portions of trail that are badly eroded, but still walkable. An occasional yellow rectangular blaze reassures hikers that they are on a trail corridor shared by the Northwest Path. When you cross over Two Holes of Water Road, you will encounter a roadside "Hikers" sign facing the trail. The trail runs parallel to the east side of Chatfield's Hole, a dynamic pond that changes in shape and size, season-to-season, year-to-year. After approximately one mile, you arrive at Wilson's Grove. The signage here is confusing. Hikers should just follow the white rectangles of the Paumanok Path. This path takes you to Old Northwest Road, where it intersects with Northwest Road. There is a Paumanok Path blaze, but it is barely perceptible when looking diagonally across that wide intersection; there is nothing indicating that you are following the Northwest Path. Once you cross the road and re-enter the woods, the trail is easy to follow and the occasional yellow triangles reappear. After about a half mile you will encounter, on the west side of the trail, a very pronounced depression called Samp Mortar Hollow. A short distance further, standing on the edge of another kettlehole, you will find Standing Rock. On the windy day that I hiked this, the large erratic made a splendid windbreak to rest and have a snack. Continuing north, you will find yourself at Five Corners, situated in the center of a wide tract of protected land. The trail cuts straight across this intersection. If you don't see a blaze within about 200 paces after crossing the intersection, suspect that you have lost the trail. You can turn around and check for blazes in the opposite direction to see whether or not you are still on the trail.

About a half mile further on, just south of Scoy Pond, the Paumanok Path and the Northwest Path separate. The Paumanok Path runs along the southern edge of the pond and the Northwest Path runs north to Cedar Point Park. For a short distance the only blazes you will see are the white rectangles of the Paumanok Path. However, when you cross Northwest Road the white blazes are joined by the orange rectangular blazes of Foster's Path. Cut across a dirt parking area, and follow the path up a small hill to the Scoy Cemetery.

As the trail heads south, the oaks and pines are replaced by stands of cedar, indicating a recent disturbance to the woods. The trail skirts a residential area, where you will see many "No Hunting" signs and bullet holes in trees. When the trail enters back into the oak and pine forest, it zigzags so much that it is disorienting. Fear not, the trail is well blazed here. The trail now leaves the large contiguous tracts of preserved land and enters a narrow corridor, winding its way through a residential area.

Soon Foster's Path and the Paumanok Path split. The Paumanok Path heads in an easterly direction and Foster's Path turns to the right. Continue to follow the red blazes of Foster's Path. After a few hundred yards you will pass the entrance to a blue-blazed trail; it runs west to the Northwest Path. Foster's Path makes its way to Old Northwest Road where you turn left and follow the blazes on the telephone poles along the shoulder of the road. At Mulford Ave. follow the right turn blaze (an upside down red "L") across the street onto what looks like a driveway. Pass by the right side of Jason's Rock and follow the trail as it winds its way through a residential section. The trail crosses over driveways and parallels roads. Look for a right turn blaze that takes you onto Lower Bull Path. You can turn back onto the Paumanok Path when you first approach Chatfield's Hole, or follow the trail to the Foster's Path trailhead located a couple of hundred feet south (to the left) of where the Paumanok Path crosses Two Holes of Water Road. A mile walk west along the Paumanok Path brings you back to the site of the proposed trailhead at Edward's Hole Road.

This is an invigorating walk for the experienced hiker.

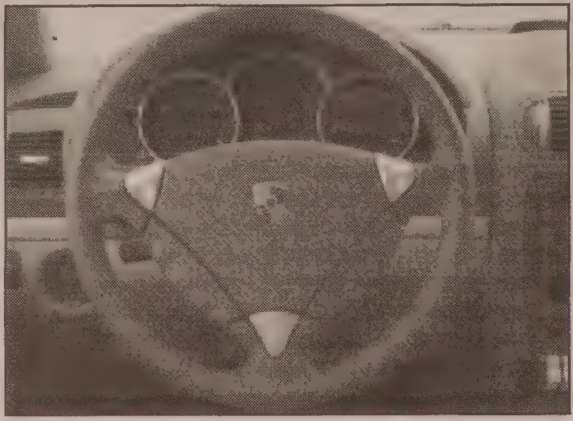
CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

In the last article, I wrote about how certain facets of a car drive me crazy. Here are a few more elements about the inside of modern automobiles that irk me. Dashboard instruments seem to be disappearing. Most cars today have only a speedometer, gasoline and water temperature gauges. Thankfully, sporty cars have a tachometer. Every other function seems to be indicated by what are appropriately called "idiot lights." Why? I figure because they were conceived by idiots to replace what were once very informative instrument panels. Unfortunately, the idiot lights come on after the problem has occurred, whereas the "old fashioned" and obviously more expensive instrument gauges warned you of an impending problem.

One of the prominent and scary lights on the dashboard today is the "check engine" light. This gut-wrenching signal can light up when you have lost all your engine oil, thus informing you that any second, your $10,000 engine might blow up, or simply that your gas cap is not on tight. No one is really sure what to do when that light comes on. Of course, the idiots out there screech to a stop and pull over to the side of the road in sheer panic.

Most older cars had, at the very least, an oil pressure gauge. Believe it or not, this is probably the most important instrument a car can have, because it will immediately tell you the condition of the engine. Put simply, if your engine is running and the oil pressure drops to zero, your engine is about to die a grim death. Knowledge of oil pressure is so important that most serious race cars have a big red light placed right in front of the driver to supplement the oil pressure gauge that brightly glows if oil pressure is low. The best part of this instrument is that you can read trends and possible impending disaster if the oil pressure starts to slowly drop.



Oil is the lifeblood of an engine. However, another gauge that is rarely included in today's cars is an oil temperature gauge. This is another important engine condition trend device. If you are driving along and suddenly your engine oil temperature starts to rise, it warns you that something is amiss. To an astute driver, cross-checking water and oil temperature along with oil pressure can give a very good idea of an engine's condition.

I also like the aesthetics of instruments festooned all over the place. Men, and cars, were more virile in the past. When you stepped into a fifties British roadster, you were entering the cockpit of a Spitfire fighter plane. There were instruments for everything scattered all over the dash, even in front of the passenger. It certainly gave the passenger involvement in the driving experience.

Jaguars and MGs seemed to have the most instruments. The early Jaguars even had a neat little button under the oil pressure gauge that, when pressed, informed the driver of the amount of oil in the sump. Strangely, the fifties German sports cars, like Mercedes and Porsche, had simple instrument panels when compared to the British cars and not that many instruments. Porsches were the most simple, and, since they were air-cooled, they obviously didn't need a water temperature gauge. The early air-cooled Volkswagen Beetles lack gauges. The speedometer was the only instrument. No gas gauge. When you ran out of gas you simply turned a lever under the dash that accessed another gallon of emergency fuel. Of course, this lack of gauges was supposed to save money, making the early Volkswagen one of the least expensive cars in the marketplace.

I believe it was the German cars that led the trend to fewer dashboard instruments. They were probably saying that their cars were so superior and their engines so trouble-free that their cars didn't need no stinking gauges. Clever, because they also saved a lot on manufacturing costs.

American cars of the fifties lost their instrument gauges, but oh......those early twenties and thirties era automobiles. Expensive automobiles like Duesenberg had dashboards that were works of art. It seemed the more expensive the vehicle, the more visually delightful the dash.

I recently had the pleasure of driving a 1936 Cord 810, with a magnificent set of instruments set in a dash made of engine turned metal. What a delight for the senses. Many cars today have beautiful dashboards, but they certainly lack proper instruments. Perhaps some retro thinking manufacturer will produce a car whose dash is beautifully cluttered with all telling instruments.

Maybe it's a macho pickup truck phenomenon, but the only vehicle I can think of that has a full instrument panel is the Ford F150 pickup truck, America's best selling vehicle. Lesson learned, Detroit? Is it time to put the dash back in dashboards?

This Takes the Cake

The problem with cakes today is that everyone goes for look and no one goes for taste. I've been to far too many weddings in the past few years where the cake looks impressive, but is dry, stale, and has the flavor of being in the refrigerator for too long. Sometimes I wish they'd just bought a couple of those chocolate Entemann's cakes, stacked them on top of each other and covered them in buttercream icing. At least then we'd know what we were getting.

For a successful cake, finding a reputable baker is key. Sadly, people recall the food at a wedding with equal clarity as they do the bride's dress (and they barely remember what the groom was wearing at all, unless it's the bride's dress). Anyway, here are a few suggestions to ensure your wedding will be remembered for the greatest cake ever. And, of course, the beautiful union of two people.

There are several factors that go into choosing a cake. First, like everything else in a wedding, is money. If the sky is the limit, then it doesn't really matter, but most people have a budget. Working within that budget is so important.

Once you've set your cost, then you must decide whether or not the cake is going to be served per seat or at a dessert table. If it is at a dessert table, you may not have to factor in the total number of guests, as some will more than likely not eat the cake. It's not exactly low-carb friendly. If you will be serving the cake per seat, then it is imperative to make sure you have enough cake for everyone. The last thing you need is for the father of the bride to get stiffed on his piece after he shelled out all the money for it.

Design is important. And the fancier it is, the more expensive, but not necessarily the better tasting. Ideally, you want to find a baker who can produce a beautiful cake that tastes great. Before visiting bakeries, do some research, whether it's asking friends who have been recently married, or looking up names in the phonebook. Come up with a comprehensive list. Next begin to think of styles. Tiers are always a crowd pleaser, but how many? What colors, designs, etc? Look in magazines for ideas or if you think you know what you want, sketch it out, before meeting the baker.

In recent years, cakes have become more inventive. Rolled fondant is making a huge resurgence in cake design. Because it can take any shape and is fairly flexible, fondant is being used in lieu of icing to cover the cake, which gives you the ability to create intricate patterns. For additional decorations,

Best Wedding Movies Ever

Nothing beats a good comedic wedding scene in a movie because everyone can relate to them in one way or another. Let's face it, weddings can be pretty funny and Hollywood has figured this out. Over the years we've all seen dozens of movies with a wedding theme or with wedding scenes in them. But which ones are the best scenes? Well, the Dan's Papers research department got to work to find out the best wedding scenes that film has to offer.

One of the most memorable wedding moments is in the movie Old School directed by Todd Phillips and starring comics Will Ferrell, Luke Wilson and Vince Vaughn. The beginning of the movie is a wedding scene where Will Ferrell (Frank) is getting married. His two best friends Mitch (Luke Wilson) and Beanie (Vince Vaughn) are standing proudly next to him as his bride-to-be starts down the aisle. At this point Beanie starts whispering to Frank that he needs to run while he still can and to get out of the wedding as soon as possible.

Beanie whispers urgently to Frank, "You need to get out of this. I got a wife, kids. Do I sound like a happy guy to you, Franky? There's my wife. Now, see that: always smiling, hi honey, judging, watching. Look at the baby, look at the baby!"

At this point the bride is almost at the altar and the wedding goes off without a hitch as Frank looks completely terrified.

Another great wedding scene is in the movie Spaceballs. This classic comedy starts off with a wedding in the future, on the planet Druidia. The hilarious film, directed by legend Mel Brooks, has an arranged marriage between Princess Vespa (Daphne Zuniga) and Prince Valium (J. Bullock). However, Princess Vespa does not want to wed Prince Valium and in the middle of the ceremony she runs full speed out the door with her android assistant rolling behind her. She then jumps into a spacecraft and flies away. Then the camera gets a shot of Prince Valium, who is nearly half asleep and yawns as he yells out, "Come baaaaa (yawn) aack!"

Quite possibly the funniest wedding movie ever made is about the marriage of a young bachelor to his long time girlfriend in the already classic comedy known as American Wedding. This film, directed by Jesse Dylan, follows the wedding process from start to finish as actor Jason Biggs plays his alter ego, Jim Levinstein. One of the best scenes of the movie is when Jim's best friend Stiffler (played by Sean William Scott) has to wait around for the family dog to use the bathroom because he accidentally allowed it to eat the wedding ring. There is a hilarious shot of Stiffler staring at the dog as he is sitting on a bench and yelling at it to hurry up.

You just can't beat the great comedic combo of Owen Wilson and Vince Vaughn in the comedy hit, Wedding Crashers. This movie is about two guys that go to weddings with the sole intention of picking up women, and the success they gain from this endeavor is unmatched by any other picking-up-women scam. By far the funniest scenes are in the first fifteen minutes where we see Owen Wilson and Vince Vaughn partying like rock stars at various weddings and running their pickup lines on different women. You won't want to miss this movie now that it's out on DVD.

The greatest wedding movie of all time, however, was a movie that nobody expected to do well in theaters. You couldn't stop the comedic chemistry in the famous wedding movie My Big Fat Greek Wedding. Directed by Joel Zwick and starring John Corbett ("Sex and The City") and Nia Vardalos, the movie is about a young Greek woman that falls deeply in love with a non-Greek man and has to deal with her traditional family who wants her to only marry Greek. The movie is filled with one-liners. The best wedding scene is at the end of the movie where the married couple comes flying out of the wedding chapel amidst the largest and loudest Greek family you have ever seen.

Lastly, we have decided that the movie The Wedding Singer, with Adam Sandler, has one of the greatest wedding scenes. Sandler is found singing at a wedding while depressed about breaking up with his girlfriend. He is drunk on stage and goes on a rant about how much he hates relationships. This movie is not to be missed.

Although the best wedding scenes in movies are hilarious, you can't top how funny a real wedding can be. Usually it all gets caught on home video and, try as they might, Hollywood has yet to top them.

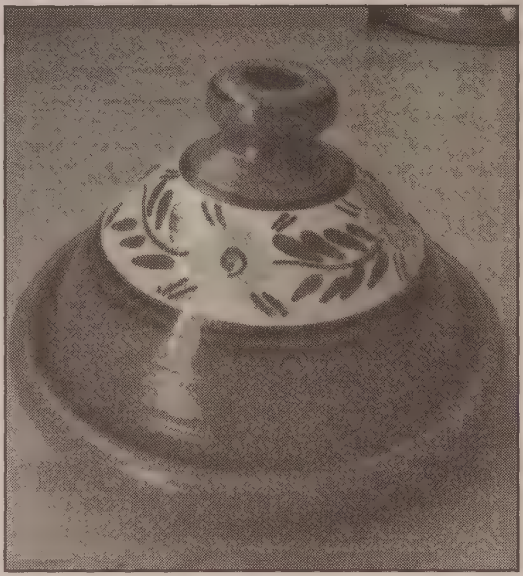
Taking Marriage from a Simmer to a Sizzle

By Silvia Lehrer



So you've tied the knot, found a new place to live, and are about to prepare your first family meal, only to realize your kitchen is still empty. The sterling silver cake knife from your second cousin can't dice onions, and dining on holiday china doesn't exactly make sense on a random Wednesday night while watching "Lost." If you're still planning your wedding, register for a few of these items and get your marriage off to the right start.

I have been cooking professionally for more than 30 years. For 12 of those years I ran my own cooking school and gourmet tabletop shop, Cooktique, in Tenafly, New Jersey. Needless to say I've accumulated numerous pieces of kitchen equipment; a variety of pots and pans, electric appliances, cooking utensils, knives, baking equipment, and so on. And I have held on to most of this equipment with love and respect and to simply make the job easier.

I simply couldn't do without my professionally forged stainless steel 8" chef's knife, a 4" inch paring knife, 6" slicing knife and a sturdy bread knife. A good knife is an investment and should last a lifetime. Never, never put your knives in the dishwasher – the extreme heat will dull the blades and ruin the handles.

As any good cook knows, flimsy pots just can't stand up against heat. For starters, a basic set of pots and pans can include a 6 – 8" stock pot, a 10" inch skillet, a 3-4 quart saucepan and a 12" covered Dutch sauté. Stainless steel with an aluminum core throughout is recommended for good heat distribution. As the range of your cooking skills broadens you will want to add to your "matched set." One of my favorite pans is Calphalon's aluminum 12" skillet which gives a great sizzle when I want to sauté. The heat distribution is dependably even with no hot spots. Enamel over cast iron with an aluminum core makes another great addition. Various size saucepots with tight-fitting lids are extremely useful for preparing stews and braised dishes. These pots are also attractive enough to go from stove to tabletop.

When the revolutionary food processor Cuisinart first appeared in the early 70s I was one of the first to own one. I find it most useful when entertaining; making easy work of slicing, chopping and shredding. It's like having an extra-pair of hands in the kitchen. I frequently use a small processor to grate Parmesan cheese, chop nuts and to make bread crumbs from left over bread. Most dedicated bakers can't do without KitchenAid's mixing machine. It truly makes light work for all your baking needs. The immersion blender is another favorite electric "toy." I can puree my soups directly in the saucepan without messing up the blender or processor bowl.

There are a number of essential tools necessary for the basic kitchen. Included are quality wooden spoons and spatulas; glass and graduating metal measuring cups and metal measuring spoons; rubber spatulas for scraping and folding; graduated sets of metal, glass or porcelain mixing bowls; a colander for draining cooked foods; sturdy stainless strainer with handle; a kitchen timer; an instant meat thermometer; and a can't-do-without salad spinner for drying greens are just some of my favorite kitchen things. I'm also in love with the microplane zester, known as a rasp. The idea, stolen from a carpenter's tool, grates hard cheeses into fluffy little mounds, and zests citrus rind, when all else might fail. The tool has been expanded to include a medium ribbon grater for soft cheeses and chocolate.

Classic utensils stand the test of time and the above list is essentially the things I depend on despite the trends. A visit to the Loaves and Fishes Cookshop, in Bridgehampton, and Williams-Sonoma, in the Bridgehampton Commons, brought a whole new dimension to the world of cookery. Mark Sann of Loaves and Fishes introduced me to the tagine, flameproof pottery from Emile Henri. This attractive cookware with its conical shaped cover has become very popular for one pot cooking in the Moroccan and Middle Eastern manner. Mark also pointed out the newest trend in knives, the santoku from the Shun line. This Japanese version of the all-purpose chef's knife with its pakka (a type of wood) handle felt light and well-balanced in the hand. The Damascus, another santoku style knife is made in the Japanese sword making tradition. Each retails for $110. A worthwhile investment if you're in the market for a chef's knife.

Cuisipro, a stainless balloon thermowhisk at Loaves and Fishes caught my eye. When whisking custards or tempering chocolate it has an internal temperature sensor. Viking toasters and Nespresso's espresso makers at the high-end of kitchen equipment are handsome and very popular. If you're in the market for new dinnerware stop by Loaves and Fishes to see the beautiful display of Haviland Limoges and their Laque de Chine line of stunning colorful bordered plates, rimmed with platinum or 22 carat gold.

Williams-Sonoma has been an institution since the late 50s. This well known chain has just about anything for the kitchen, as well as the bath. One of the newer items offered is the spice toaster. Kathy, the store manager, introduced me to a stainless-steel mesh basket with a bamboo handle designed to hold over an open flame. This intriguing tool is very useful to toast nuts and seeds thus eliminating a skillet. They're currently running a Wüsthof santoku knife special at $89.95. New at Williams-Sonoma, too, is the microplane box grater, an enameled wok and bamboo steamer, a matte enamel deep fry pan with a wire rack for draining and a domed cast-iron grill pan for indoor grilling. I could go on and on.

Since you are planning to equip a kitchen that will stand the test of time, it is important that you invest in kitchenware with the same longevity.

Cake

marzipan is generally used. But we're not just talking about carrots on top of a carrot cake anymore. Unique three-dimensional shapes, like fish (see image) can be incorporated into the most creative cake designs you've ever seen.

Another trend that has been making a dent in the wedding world is the cupcake. But this isn't your second grade birthday party cupcake. Sometimes they are served in tiers instead of the wedding cake, and other times they are served to complement a traditional wedding cake.

Whatever your choice, be it cupcakes, buttercream, or fondant, the most important thing to do in deciding on a cake is to taste everything. I know you brides are looking to slim down for that second fitting, but even if it means a couple extra hours on the treadmill, TASTE EVERYTHING. You should order your cake at least six to eight weeks before the wedding, which will give you plenty of time to get slim and trim for that final fitting.

How to Look Fantastic Without the Plastic

It's the night of the Oscars, a televised parade of fabulous faces, figures and fashions that turns most of us green with envy. As they are every year, copycat frocks and costume jewelry mirroring this evening's accoutrements will be in stores in a New York minute, available to all of us who aspire to the heights of Hollywood trends. But what about the secrets of the glowing skin, the unlined foreheads and toned tummies?

Until recently, the procedures that preceded every perfect red carpet appearance were assumed to be costly, risky and followed by the type of recovery time that only a movie star can indulge. But according to the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery (AACS), 70% of all the cosmetic surgeries performed in 2005 were actually the less expensive, less extensive, more accessible non-surgical treatments such as Botox, microdermabrasion, chemical peels, and Restylane. More reasons for this surge in popularity are how quickly these procedures can be performed, the lack of downtime for recovery and the speedy results.

While I am not considering a career on the silver screen, I have been quietly following the shift in attitude toward cosmetic surgery over the past few years, as it has gone from almost unmentionable to mainstream. I did a bit of research on the newest procedures, but didn't really think I'd go through with anything. Doubts about effectiveness, fear of looking "plastic," and anxiety about the safety have always been in the back of my mind. But last week, I took a deep breath and walked into East End Laser Care in Southampton for a consultation with the founder and medical director, Dr. Alexander Covey.

My lingering apprehension melted away. The office was not intimidating and the personnel were all lovely and friendly. The waiting room was occupied by a teenager and a senior citizen, thereby erasing the old-fashioned image I held of those who choose elective beautifying treatments and those who administer them. In fact, a moment after I sat down the door opened again, and an acquaintance of mine arrived for her appointment. My coat was taken, coffee was served and my nervousness dissipated.

Dr. Covey is board-certified in cosmetic surgery by the American Board of Laser Surgery, a fellow of the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery and a member of the American Society for Dermatologic Surgery. Glancing around the waiting room, I saw several Castle Connolly citations earned for being one of the "Top Doctors in New York," for 2003, 2004, and 2005, and emotional letters from patients expressing their appreciation. All good. But the amazing part was yet to come.

I was escorted to an examining room and Dr. Covey arrived minutes later. I had never seen "before and after" photos of non-invasive cosmetic surgery, and when Dr. Covey gave me a slideshow on a laptop computer, I was stunned. The improvements to the faces and bodies of both men and women were astonishing. Double chins were gone, under-eye bags were gone, angry red capillaries and rosacea were soothed, laugh lines and forehead wrinkles – gone and gone. Love handles halved, brown spots vanished, scars faded. Acne smoothed, tummies flattened, and crow's feet – gone, gone, gone. Years gone, but not forgotten – no one looked freakishly young and no one looked like Melanie Griffith.

My consultation was informative and upbeat, and actually made me consider undertaking a procedure or two. Depending on your needs and desires, Dr. Covey will recommend a procedure or a combination of procedures, all non-invasive, that can each be performed in under an hour in one of his offices. Most will have you seeing results that same day. He then follows up personally with phone calls to every patient, answering questions and ensuring satisfaction with the results. That is a great feeling of security.

While laser wrinkle-reduction and Botox are the most common treatments, Dr. Covey also offers: Collagen, Restylane, Radiesse and other natural fillers; laser hair removal; laser treatments for lines and wrinkles, acne and acne scarring, brown spots, facial veins, rosacea and stretch marks; Mesotherapy (to melt away cellulite and fat) and Thermage (non-surgical face-lift).

My visit to East End Laser care was a success. What does that mean, exactly? Well, if you see me and I look fabulous, you may wonder. But a woman never tells.

Dr. Covey holds free informational seminars at the Inn at East Wind, at 5720 Route 25A, Wading River. You can learn about all the new cosmetic procedures and see before and after photos. The next one is Tuesday March 21, at 7 p.m. For more information, please call their offices. You can also schedule a free consultation. For a thorough guide to procedures and much more, go to www.eastendlasercare.com.

Nailments Shmailments

My nails have been a mess lately. Literally breaking, splitting, peeling……even growing those annoying white spots that appear for no apparent reason. Or is there a reason for all these nailments?

I contacted Jodi Pollock, Vice President of Barielle, the prestige nail, hand and foot care line. Barielle first developed its product after treating horses' hooves and noticing that when they rubbed their cream on the hooves, the nails became stronger and the cuticles better……(Who knew horses had cuticles?) After this, they altered the formula a little and produced it for people……Their first product ever was called Nail Strengthener Cream.

Barielle now boasts that its products can help you achieve a perfect spring manicure with base coats for every nail concern. Whether your nails are stressed out from cold weather, stained from dark winter polish, or need ridges relief, Pollock says that Barielle can help you get your bases covered.

I needed to know more. I had some questions and I wanted answers…but would Pollock nail them? I asked:

What does one do for yellow nails?

"Nails are generally yellow or stained due to tobacco, or the application of dark nail polish directly onto the nail plate, without a protective base coat," she says. So, in other words, wear a base coat to prevent yellowing nails. OPI does a great base coat and Barielle's Natural Nail Camouflage is used to conceal yellowing or stained nails. This specially formulated ridge filling treatment will also conceal imperfections while guarding against splits and breaks.

What does one do for splitting and hard to grow, weak nails?

"Excessive splitting and peeling can be due to dietary deficiencies, i.e. vitamin B, or, overexposure to water or strong cleaning substances."

So, be sure to wear rubber gloves when doing the dishes, or cleaning. Vitamin B tabs aren't a bad idea, either.

Barielle suggests staying away from nail lacquers of any kind, including treatment lacquers. The idea is to heal your nails on the inside first, before you coat the outside. To do this, you need a cream to massage into your nails daily and nightly, such as Barielle's Nail Strengthening Cream. Also, try OPI's Nail Envy Natural Nail Strengthener for weak nails.

What are the white spots that often appear on nails in the nailbed?

"It is called leukonychia and many things can cause it. In most cases, it comes from trauma – such as hitting or slamming your fingernail into something. If this is the case there is nothing to worry about, it should grow out as your nail grows. However, if you notice the white spots looking a little yellow, it might be an indication of a fungal, yeast, or bacterial infection, in which case you should contact a dermatologist," says Pollock.

What are the most popular and best colors to wear in the coming months?

"People choose nail colors for many different reasons. Generally they choose colors that either complement their skin tones, or match the latest season's trendy fashions," Pollock reveals. "The best part about nail polish is that because it's a relatively (to other cosmetic products) inexpensive means of self-expression, no rules apply. The hot colors for spring are pinks and purples. We suggest shades by Barielle in Passionate, Delightful and Expressive."

Suzi Weiss-Fischmann, Executive Vice President of OPI, said: "For spring/summer 2006, OPI turns to Mexico… The season's forecast calls for softer, more neutral shades influenced by nature (think lavender growing in the field, pale green cactus or dried pink roses) as well as the brighter colors that summer seems to invite (warm reds and corals, brilliant shades of citrus, rich golds). Combine these with the gorgeous hues seen in daily Mexican life (hand-painted earth-tone tiles with touches of cobalt, brightly-colored doorways, muted shades of sun-baked pottery, vivid embroidered blouses, bold red chiles) and you will feel the excitement that we do over the palette of colors we're offering this season."

How does one keep color on and chip free?

It takes a lacquer with a high gloss, clear coating that provides brilliance to the nail color, as well as providing a hard, chip-resistant coating that helps extend the wear of your manicure. Barielle's Ultra Speed Dry Manicure Extender was developed to help protect the nail and color from UV radiation (to help keep dark colors from fading and light colors from yellowing) OPI also has a product called Chip Skip, and one coat of it prior to base coat prevents chipping.

If you have problem nails, investigate the great treatments of my two favorite nail product lines. Go to www.barielle.com and www.opi.com You, too, can hit any nailment on the head.

New Cosmetic Procedures In Long Island

Have you ever wanted to know more about the cosmetic procedures they talk about on Oprah? On Tuesday, March 21st at 7 p.m. Dr. Alexander Covey of East End Laser Care will present a FREE SEMINAR and share the latest secrets of cosmetic surgery with you. Dr. Covey has been providing cosmetic procedures to the people of Long Island since 1988 and has been repeatedly named "One of the Top Doctors in New York" by the Castle Connolly Guide.

At the seminar, Dr. Covey will discuss everything from the latest breakthrough treatment Mesotherapy, a non-surgical technique to melt away fat, cellulite and unwanted inches, and Thermage, the amazing non-surgical skin tightening procedure used to tighten sagging skin on your face, neck, and other parts of your body, such as your arms, legs, abdomen and buttocks, to state-of-the-art Laser Treatments for "lines and wrinkles, acne and acne scarring, brown spots, facial veins, rosacea, and stretch marks."

Learn how exciting new "Filler Facelifts" restore volume and fullness, eliminate facial lines, and even reshape your nose using Botox, Collagen, Restylane, Radiesse and other natural fillers. Find out how Laser Hair Removal can permanently reduce unwanted hair. He will also tell you about Glo™ Minerals, the advanced mineral makeup used by celebrities such as Geena Davis, Holly Hunter, and Jane Seymour, and the official makeup of the 75th Annual Academy Awards now available in our offices.

You will meet patients who have had remarkable results and find out how cosmetic treatments can help you look better and feel better. In short, this is your chance to find out more about what's new in the world of cosmetic procedures.

All seminar attendees will receive FREE Gifts and Special Discounts. There will also be drawings for FREE Cosmetic Treatments, a FREE Glo™ Minerals makeup application and a FREE Vacation for 2.

Call (631) 878-9200 NOW to register. PRE-REGISTRATION IS NECESSARY. (Last time many people had to be turned away). This seminar will take place at The Inn at East Wind at 5720 Route 25A in Wading River and will begin at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

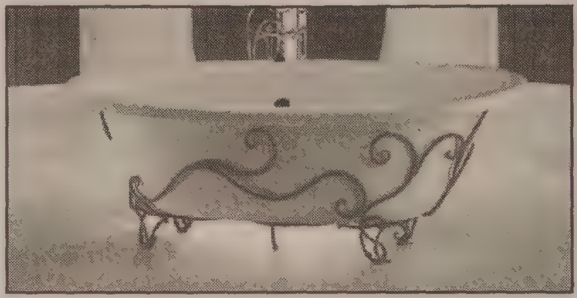
We are asking for a donation of non-perishable food which will be contributed to the Family Service League which has been helping underprivileged children and families on Long Island since 1926.

Dan's HOME

Your Own Private Oasis

In the winter, when the house is filled with people, sometime the only place for a moment of peace is the bathroom. A room where you can shut the door, lean back in a bathtub seasoned with bath salts or overflowing with perfumed, fragrant bubbles and ignore what's going on in the rest of the house for a few luxurious minutes. That being said, I'm about to give you some quick tips for turning your ordinary bathroom into a quiet place your own.

First, you need to create a little atmosphere via your color scheme and towel selection. Two words: Soft and fluffy. By soft, I mean the coloring and entire mood of the room. I don't know about you, but I just can't relax in a bright yellow room. Yet a room decorated in a softer yellow – let's say a pastel – makes me feel peaceful and serene. Enhance your room coloring with candles in similar shades and colored bath beads. Bath and Body Works has an excellent selection of both and the Yankee Candle Company has a wonderful selection of fragrant candles in a variety of shades to match any color you select. Now for fluffy: nobody likes a rough towel. Go out and find the softest, most fluffy and comfortable bath towel that you can find. Bed, Bath and Beyond; Elegant John; Linens 'n Things; and Macy's have some great selections of towels. When you step out of that bath, you want to wrap yourself in luxury to keep the mood going.



Now, we get to the important part...the tub. You want extreme comfort. The tub just has to be the perfect fit for your frame and shape and in proportion to your bathroom. One of the greatest tubs around is the Corner Pegasus Whirlpool Bath. This oval shaped tub fits snugly into any corner of your bathroom. If you want to enjoy that whirlpool of warm water under direct sunlight of your window, simply tuck it in and install. The Corner baths come in a variety of sizes and shapes to accommodate one or two people – ah, romance. Kohler sells some wonderful free-standing tubs with Iron Works Tellieur. The tub is supported by metal legs and comes in an assortment of colors in the almond and white range. The one bathtub that really caught my eye is the Maax Moonlight Bathtub. It's 78"x 38"x 29" and features a wrought iron support frame for the tub that looks like a vine of ivy creeping gently up the tub. It's elegant and inviting. You can imagine the moon shining through your bathroom window, not to mention yourself luxuriating in the scented oils in your bath while listening to some classical music.

If you are a shower person, and I'm sure quite a few of you are, you enjoy the warm, cascading spray of water on your tired muscles. In your case, you need the right showerhead, not one that simply sprays, but massages as well. Signature Hardware features a variety of showerheads that rival spas. I highly recommend the ceiling mount showerheads. The fixtures come in a variety of sizes and are easily mounted on your shower ceiling. The spray is like a gentle spring rain coming down on you in a steady, relaxing flow. The sound rivals any waterfall you've ever heard and you feel like you are in the tropics. It's sure to send your tensions and headaches right down the drain.

To make your relaxation experience one that you remember and to turn your bathroom into the "spa" that you want it to be, invest in a waterproof cd player or radio. The right music can really make the difference in your mood. SONY makes a very sturdy shower cd player/clock radio that features 25 station pre-sets. You can pop in that jazz cd or turn to your favorite rock station and not worry about the shower spray getting in the way. JWin electronics features a similar item, yet this one has a fog free feature so you can clearly see the stations you want to select.

Other suggested items for your bathroom are potpourri mixes in the colors of your room, fresh flowers in a matching vase, arranging an array of matching soaps in clear glass jars or simply taking a fruit or vegetable peeler and mixing soap shavings in a clear vase for a beautiful layered effect.

A little preparation can mean the difference in turning your bathroom into a room of luxury, rather than a room of function. Make it the one room in your house that you can truly call your own.

The Garden At Rock Cottage

by Lance Brilliantine

Start Planning Summer Bulbs

We are within two months of the time to set out seedlings on the East End. Now is an excellent time to plan accents for the garden in the form of summer bulbs. These versatile, colorful, and often fragrant additions provide accents to the summer border. If you don't mind lifting the bulbs in the Fall for some of these, they will reward you year after year with brilliant color displays that are great for cutting or just for enjoying in the garden.

Typically, the bulbs called "summer bulbs" are those that are either hardy or not hardy and bloom from early June through September in the northeast. They all have an underground storage structure, that may be in the form of corms, rhizomes, tubers, or bulbs. They may be large like the bulbs of elephant ears or scaly like the bulbs of lilies. Others may be rhizomes like ginger and iris, or look like potatoes as with dahlias. All of these structures store food through the winter to boost plant emergence and provide the flowers for the following season.

Summer flowering bulbs can be found in nurseries and from garden supply shops at this time of year. Those that are hardy can be planted as soon as soil can be worked. Those that are not hardy should be planted after the danger of frost is past – or started in a greenhouse or warm, sunny room. There are many types of bulbs to choose from.

Lilies are probably the most popular selection. They thrive in full sun to partial shade. Lilies require good drainage and some mulch to keep the roots cool. (A note on mulch: be careful about purchasing mulch this year; look out for mulch made from felled trees in New Orleans, many of which were infected with Formosan termites. The mulch may contain insects or eggs and is not something to introduce to your garden.) Lilies make great cut flowers and provide gorgeous color during the summer. Planted in groups, lilies make a wonderful garden addition. Most are hardy and will survive undisturbed for years.

Speaking of lilies, daylilies, though not related to bulbed lilies, also make bright color displays in early to mid-summer. Like their bulbous counterparts, daylilies grow well in full sun to partial shade. They prefer soil that is high in organic matter, and require good drainage. These plants grow and spread in the garden, making gorgeous color displays, and last well into mid-summer. Some are even re-blooming.

Both lilies and daylilies are vulnerable to deer. If you decide to use either of these, plant them where they will not suffer from eating. Nothing is more disappointing that to see flower buds one day and bare stalks the next!

While not a favorite at Rock Cottage, irises are another popular summer bulb. They typically flower during early summer. Bearded irises, the best known, come in many colors such as blue, lavender, salmon, and white. Bearded Iris grows well in full sun. Proper soil drainage is important in preventing bacterial rot of the rhizomes.

Dahlias are another summer bulb that offers both beauty and variety. They thrive in full-sun or partial shade and prefer moist, well-drained soil. Their many brilliant and rich colors make striking displays that provide an excellent garden backdrop. Some dahlias come as single-blossomed flowers, other dahlias have double blossoms. Dahlias also provide varying heights.

Among the non-hardy summer bulbs, elephant ears, caladiums, canna lilies, and tuberoses are some that are used each year at Rock Cottage. These summer blooming bulbs produce both beautiful leaves (enormous in the case of elephant ears) and flowers. They typically love hot summer sun, but need rich soil and a good supply of moisture. These tender summer bulbs are suitable for container plantings as well as for border displays in the garden. To get a jumpstart on the wonderful displays these bulbs provide, start them now so that they will start their growth process. They can be set out in the garden in late May – well after any danger of cold weather has passed.

If you are looking for taller flowers, gladiolus, while not our favorite, provide a linear line to the garden with their long flower spikes. They prefer full sun locations and moist soil that is well drained. They make great cut flowers, and come in many colors.

Summer bulbs are a delightful garden addition and provide brilliant colors. Watch your local nurseries this spring for the best selections!

Real Estates

by Diane Strecker

What's happening west of the Canal? Brokers there are busy finding waterfront summer rentals for their clients who, for the most part, want to be on the oceanfront. This is nothing new in this area. Each year, most agencies have all inventory rented early on and the oceanfront estates are are snapped up first. This year, this is especially true. And, the 2006 rental market has been hot.

Meadowcroft Estate in Quiogue

Sales prices have not changed much there either, regardless of all the hype and talk about the bubble we are all yet to see burst. There are some impressive estates in Quogue, Quiogue, Westhampton Beach and Remsenburg. They are among some of the most beautiful oceanfront estates on the East End and many buyers are finding value for their dollar here. In Quogue, for example, you can buy a stunning 12,000 sq ft estate that has 10 baths, 10 bedrooms on the ocean, with a pool, tennis court and just about every other amenity you could imagine on almost 4 acres for $12.9 million, a sum that may seem like a great deal of money to some.

But, if you take that same money over to the Southampton's Gin Lane or out onto Further Lane in East Hampton, which is also on the oceanfront, prices double. It is amazing how prices can vary on the very same oceanfront, just a little farther east down the same stretch of beach. Land in those estates areas is made of gold and owning a good size parcel of it will cost you dearly. Just this past year, two acres of prime Southampton oceanfront sold for $20 million. Yes, just for the land. Another mansion on the ocean in Southampton just recently sold for $32 million. What makes the difference is the privacy factor.

Some estates in Quogue, Remsenburg and the surrounding area are sizeable, but many are in a closer proximity to one another than that of the East Hampton and Southampton areas. Quaint Villages like Remsenberg also offer a high level of privacy as well as small town charm. Sizeable oceanfront estates west of the Shinnecock Canal can range in price anywhere from $10- $15 million, depending on the size of the property and its proximity to the ocean, bays or inlets.

For just under $10 million, you can buy a secluded waterfront compound on Moriches Bay in Remsenburg. This gated estate, hidden down a private lane, consists of 10,000 sq ft of living space and has a heated pool, tennis court, Swedish sauna, steam bath, wine cellar, a 5-car garage and servants quarters. There is a private dock and guest cottage all contained in its 5 acres. It is listed with Brown Harris Stevens in Bridgehampton for $9,500,000.

In East Quogue an oceanfront estate that has been up for sale for almost a year now is currently available as a summer rental this season. What makes this property unique is the 15 acres of preserve that surround its three oceanfront acres. The mansion consists of 6 bedrooms and 5.5 baths and totals 5000 sq ft. It has views of both the bay and ocean, a vanishing pool, 3-car garage and staff quarters. It is listed with Real Hamptons Real Estate in Westhampton Beach.

On the waterfront further west up the island in Sands Point on the North Shore of what was once known as Long Island's Gold Coast, another famous mansion may be awaiting its demise. The 13-acre estate that was said to be the inspiration for F. Scott Fitzgerald's The Great Gatsby, formerly named Lands End, but also dubbed "The Gatsby Mansion" may be torn down in order to replace it with an exclusive mini-estate style development project. This grand estate that is almost 100 years old overlooks the Long Island Sound. It has lawns that spread out to a pool and patio area on the brink of the shoreline. The property was listed for $50 million in the past but sold two years ago to a developer for just over $17 million. As these old estates vanish one by one, the Long Island lore that was their allure and local history unfortunately go with them. We have watched many go right here on the East End. Preservation Groups and Historical Societies in our Villages have played a large part in saving many an East End Estate. The demolition of "The Gatsby Mansion" has yet to be confirmed.

UPSTREAM WITHOUT A PADDLE

Dear Dan,

Now is the time to act. A year ago you wrote about the over harvesting of alewives from a creek in Noyac. Please use your considerable prestige and influence to make certain the town fathers, DEC or whoever is responsible prevent the destruction of this resource by overfishing. Four-hour guards are ok in my book. Years ago I viewed the migration with Pierson Topping. Sadly to say, I also viewed it in Oakdale at Rattlesnake Creek, but overfishing has destroyed that resource and I can never show that marvel of nature to my grandchildren. Thanks for your time and attention to my request.

TRUTH AND CONSEQUENCES REDUX

Dear Dan,

Your account of the events in "Winery Raided" points out an outrageous and scandalous situation.

You report that we have laws on the books that make it illegal to sell art at a winery. That's a questionable law to begin with, but even if you don't challenge it, as a taxpayer, I do not condone such capricious and wasteful police action. We do not live in Iran, and overzealous officials of this nature need to be squelched. In fact, the victims have a right to sue the authorities for millions.

In our area, there are numerous establishments that display art, and they are not necessarily in the art business, such as restaurants, bookstores, boutiques, food stores, dentists and on and on. Why not wineries? To intermingle such commodities raises the cultural ambience of the entire community. Other events are also part of the scene, such as poetry or book readings, small concerts, informative events about design, decorating, food, health, gardening etc. To curtail such activities in such a belligerent fashion (with guns) is barbaric and completely unacceptable.

This story is reminiscent of the other infamous and ludicrous highlight of our history, when Della Femina was handcuffed for his "artful display" of a bunch of pumpkins. Fortunately, he was able to make these imbeciles pay for their lunacy. The winery event deserves a much harsher treatment.

STAY ABOVE WATER

Dear Dan,

How about an update on Roy's house? Is it sinking into the ocean or has he been able to shore things up?

Thanks.

SEE US AT CMEE

Dear Dan,
Dear Julia,

From all of us at CMEE, a GREAT BIG thank you.

Your article was so well written and so much fun it made me want to rush to CMEE – then I realized I was already here,

We invite you back anytime and thank you again.

Dear Dan,

I read a story in your paper on rowing. Do you know there is a very small row club trying to bring rowing to kids and adults on Eastern Long Island? They run a summer day camp and will be starting a row program for at risk kids. A former Olympian runs it. It is struggling to buy boats and build a boathouse. For most East End kids this is the only place they can row. The only high school out this way with a row team is Riverhead. East End Rowing sets up, and runs that program. The coaches work for free and out of love for the sport. East End Rowing is holding a medieval fair on October 21, 2006 at Hallockville Farm. Would you be interested in helping the club and making this event is a success? Building the boathouse is the dream.

Thank you for your time.

Hope this helps. –DR

TRUTH AND CONSEQUENCES

Dear Dan,

Regarding the article "Winery Raided," is this satire or is this truth? In this day and age of governmental interference, after Waco and Ruby Ridge assaults by the government wire tapping everyone, I am cynical enough to believe this. As an artist having work displayed on the North Fork, my friends and I are naturally a little upset at this type of almost true (?) writing. We know there are problems, and how far will the government go to make a statement or to make a name for itself. They can do whatever they please to the people and then we are the ones whose lives are all in turmoil. Until the laws are clear and the merchants and SLA settled on what is allowed to put anyone's life and work on display is taking chances with catastrophe.

After reading all the mistakes in media, I wonder where anyone can go for the true story? Artists, vineyards and merchants deserve to know the facts where we stand, maybe a disclaimer of some kind. If this were a satire, it would help us naive readers.

THERE'S ALWAYS NEXT YEAR

Dear Dan,

My family and I have been avid readers of your paper for twenty years. 2005 was a stellar year. How will you top it in 2006?

Police Blotter

Flying Object

A man in Hampton Bays reported to police that somebody threw an unidentified object out of the window of a car and hit the windshield of his car, cracking the glass. Police are investigating what kind of object was thrown out the window. They have ruled out marshmallows.

Stolen Flat Screen

A caretaker reported to police that his flat screen television was stolen from his Bridgehampton home. The caretaker appeared extremely panicked when he reported the loss of the flat screen television to police. He was quoted saying, "Now how the heck am I supposed to watch college basketball? I can't go back to regular television, I won't! Find these evil thieves! Find them!"

Suspended License

A man in Southampton was pulled over by police for speeding. When police got his driver's license, they realized it had been suspended. He was immediately charged with aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle in the third degree. Police are considering expelling his suspended license, but have to talk with the principal first.

Kitchen Broken Into

A woman reported that $70 in cash was stolen from her pocketbook by a criminal entering into her home through her kitchen. Ironically, the woman saw the entire robbery from the living room, but hesitated to call police because she thought the man was entering her home to steal the fresh oatmeal cookies that she just baked. "I was flattered at first because I thought he was after my oatmeal cookies. Then I saw he was going for my wallet and I called the cops." Police have denied any offers from the woman for fresh oatmeal cookies. Reporters at the scene, however, took their fair share of baked goodness.

Daughter Stole Card

A taxi company canceled a $1,600 payment because the credit card used to pay the bill had been reported stolen by its owner. Police later determined that the girl (who used the card to pay for taxi rides throughout East Hampton and Southampton) is the daughter of the credit card owner. No charges have been filed, but the mother did report that she was going to ground her daughter for the rest of her natural life.

No Seatbelt

A man in Westhampton was pulled over by police for not wearing his seat belt. When police investigated further, they found that the man had two ecstasy tablets, one and a half tablets of Vicodin and a quantity of Valium. The man then tried to explain to police that the Vicodin was for pain from a sprained arm and that is why he can't wear his seat belt and the Valium is because he has trouble sleeping. Police then asked about the ecstasy and the man replied, "Would you believe, depression?" The man was taken to jail.

Rich Homeless?

A homeless man in Hampton Bays reported that somebody punched him in the face and stole $1,100 in cash from his pocket. Police explained to the man that if they found the man that did this to him they would return the $1,100. The homeless man responded by saying, "No wait, it was actually $11,000."

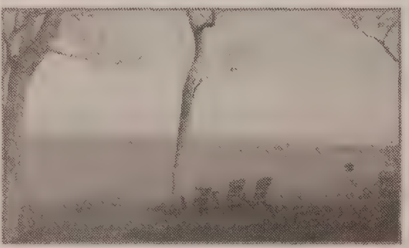
Is This the Year You Finally Buy Waterfront?



On a clear day from this spectacular Orient sound front location, you can see the lighthouses at the mouth of the Connecticut River. Step out of your seaside outdoor shower after a morning run on the beach and enjoy lunch on the bluestone terrace, or head to your water view studio to work on that novel. You won't be disturbed in this exclusive, quiet community of artistic Manhattan professionals. At the end of the day, stretch out in a bluff-top Adirondack chair and watch as sun sinks into the sea, cocktail in hand. Chic, designer Hamptons-style cottage boasts chef's kitchen for entertaining (or not), cherry floors, fireplace, two bedrooms, one-and-a-half tile baths, permit for sound-view Gunite pool in the works and lovely, privet-hedged landscaping. Shy acre and a quarter presents almost limitless possibilities for expansion, and you won't need a variance to build that 6,000 square foot dream house, if that's your thing. If not, enjoy the simple life as is. Pristine, turn-key condition. Welcome home, you've earned it.

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY - Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find. The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

Simply call 1-877-794-5363 to request this informative free report.
